BETTING EVEN ON SERIES

McGraw's Master Mind Expected to Offset Yanks' Pitching Aces

New York, Oct. 3.—Betting on the World's Series was at even money today as the Yankees and Giants prepared for the opening of baseball's great classic at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

The Yankees, who opened an 8-to-5 favorite a week ago, have rapidly been losing favor with the speculative element.

The sudden shift is due to two reasons—the poor showing of the Huggins outfit against the Red Sox and the belief of the wise heads of baseball that Jawn McGraw will prove too big a factor for the Yankee sluggers to overcome.

McGraw, master mind of baseball, rules his team with an iron hand. He has molded his outfit into a powerful unit which crashes into action without any jarring or creaking.

Huggins, on the other hand, has a team of temperamental stars. There are at least half a dozen men on the team who feel they are better qualified to manage the club than Huggins. And this condition of affairs does not tend towards harmony.

RIVAL TEAMS ON EDGE.

The opening game will play a mighty role in deciding the series. If the Giants win they will be filled with a confidence and dash which will be hard to beat. If the Yankees surge out front it will give them some of the confidence that was so

IRISH FIGHT BRITISH IN DUBLIN

By International News Service.

Dublin, Oct. 3.—A spectacular battle was fought on the quay side near O'Connell Bridge today, when Republicans made an ambush attack against a detachment of British soldiers.

Free State troops were rushed to the assistance of the British and the fighting became general in several streets. All the thoroughfares in the vicinity were quickly cleared. Citizens fled in terror.

Fighting was reported from County Kerry and County Cork. The Republicans' losses were said to be heavy.

At a meeting of the Dail Eireann (the Labor Leader Johnson introduced an amendment to the new Irish constitution which would absolve the Irish from taking oath of allegiance to the English king. There was lengthy debate. The amendment appears to be doomed to defeat.

A report that the Free State intends to exile the chief leaders of the Republicans was denied by the provisional government.

Belfast, Oct. 3 (By International News Service).—Ten Republicans were reported killed in an attack upon O'Meath, in the northern part of County Louth today. The Republicans captured the town. The Free State casualties are believed to have been heavy.

BROKER IS JAILED IN AUTO CASE

Drives Auto While Under Influence of Liquor; Gets Six Months

"Six months, House of Correction."

Louis F. Beauvais, forty-seven years, broker, living at No. 1399 Commonwealth avenue, Allson, was given that sentence by Judge Arthur P. Stone in Cambridge court today for being under the influence of liquor while driving his automobile along Charles River road, Cambridge, late Saturday night, September 23.

The story told by Officer Arthur Hollis of the Metropolitan Park Police, plus the mute testimony of a half pint bottle which Hollis said he found in one of Beauvais' pockets, overrode the broker's plea of not guilty.

Beauvais was fined $5 for intoxication. He appealed both cases. His wife, Mrs. Adelaide Beauvais, who was arrested on an intoxication charge with her husband, was found not guilty.

The Beauvais car was in collision at Charles River road and Magazine street with a car owned by James Record of Cambridge.

Officer Hollis testified he smelled liquor on Beauvais' breath when the broker stepped from his car after the crash. The half-pint bottle of liquor was an exhibit in court.

MYSTERY PUZZLES POLICE

tinguish the fires before they gained headway.

The fires were discovered by John Dacchi of No. 127 London street, East Boston, a janitor, who summoned help from the floor below. The impromptu fire squad spoiled the fire-bug's work.

Investigation of the fires is being made by city and State police. The fires were discovered at 6 o'clock Monday morning but the fact was not made known until today.

POLICE ARE PUZZLED.

The police are puzzled to figure out how any intruder could get into the building so early in the morning. The big force of candy-making girls and other operatives had not come in. The only employes supposed to be there then were watchmen, janitors and helpers. The plant is guarded during the night.

Dacchi entered the packing room in course of his duties as janitor, spied one fire blazing in a packing box containing paper, then a second similar blaze in the same room and then a third.

Silhouting to the men downstairs Dacchi went at the nearest blaze. All three fires were quickly extinguished by the janitor and the others without a call to the fire department being sent.

When the attempts at arson were reported to the police and Fire Marshal's office, State Officer Thompson was detailed, while Captain Arthur B. McConnell of Hanover street police station sent Special Officer McDonald.

Executives and employes were questioned for information that might give any light upon the arson job, but there is no explanation, so far of way anyone should set the fires or how the fire-bug managed to sneak in there, set the fires and get away.

Defends Turks

GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS.

"England has no more right in Constantinople than she has in New York."

George Fred Williams, Boston man, better acquainted with the Near East than most Americans, made the statement today, startling in the face of stories of Turkish atrocities and general sympathy for the Greeks.

Mr. Williams was for years United States minister to Greece and became familiar with conditions not only there but in Turkey. He resigned when President Wilson declared America neutral in the war.

"I cannot refrain from speaking of the attitude of England in the present crisis," said Mr. Williams today. What business has she in Constantinople? She has no more right there than she has in New York.

"I have many friends among Greeks here and abroad, and undoubtedly many will take exception to my stand. But the object of Greece was nothing more nor less than the invasion of Turkey.

FIND HULL OF SHIP THAT TOOK 16 TO DEATH

St. John's, N. F., Oct. 2.—Three fishermen of Big Barachix, Placentia Bay, Edward, Phillip and Edmund Keefe, claim to have discovered the submerged hull of the Cape Breton steamer Morien, which left Louisburg on November 16, 1912, and was never heard of afterwards.

The ship was en route to Placentia with coal, and a day or two after she left a terrific storm was experienced off the coast. It was believed that the ship was lost on the Nesais, near St. Bridges, N. F., and it is in this vicinity the wreck has been located.

The Morien carried sixteen of a crew and registered about 500 tons.

B. & M. TRAIN BREAKS; PASSENGERS WALK

Haverhill, Oct. 2.—Haverhill commuters on their way home from Boston had to walk from Bradford to Haverhill when the engine of the 5:14 p. m. from Boston broke one of its main driving wheels. Traffic was tied up until an early hour today. The engine had just passed over the Georgetown switch and was starting across the bridge to Haverhill when the accident occurred. Burned out bearings, it was stated, caused the wheel to break.

JAIL CAN'T CHANGE WOMAN'S MIND

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 3.—Mrs. Johanna Ryan has spent her tenth day in jail for refusing to sign her name to certain papers that would effect a settlement of community property between herself and the husband from whom she obtained a divorce in July.

Mrs. Ryan today reiterated her determination not to sign the papers and Judge B. M. Card, who ordered her to append her signature, said he would negotiate with her no further.

Woman Appointed U.S. Senator from Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 2.—Governor Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia made history here today when he appointed Mrs. W. H. Felton of Cartersville to the United States Senate, to succeed the late Senator Tom Watson. She is eighty-seven.

Although Mrs. Felton is the first woman senator in the United States, she will not take office because of the Georgia law which requires that the office be filled at the next following general election. Mrs. Felton will not take office because the Senate is not in session to administer the oath of office.

Governor Hardwick also today announced he would be a candidate for the regular Democratic nomination to succeed Watson.

committee on resolutions and expected to go through, contained a liquor plank against return of the open saloon, but for modification of the prohibition law. The plank read:

"While unalterably opposed to the return of the saloon, with its train of social and political evils, we recognize that experience has shown the necessity of a modification of prohibition legislation that will more strongly appeal to the clear moral sense of the people.

"But we hold that, whatever the existing law, it should be fully and honestly enforced. No condemnation can be too strong of the brazen hypocrisy behind the pretended enforcement of the law in this State by the Republican party. The open, unblushing and corrupt sale of liquor for the benefit of a mercenary, unscrupulous, boss%controlled political machine, as has existed in this State under Republican rule, is a stench in the nostrils of every decent citizen."

The platform condemned the new tariff and scored the national administration for the "bungling" manner in which it handled the coal and rail strikes.

CONDEMNS DAUGHERTY.

Attorney-General Daugherty was condemned for "abuse" of writs of injunction.

"Insincerity" of the national government on the bonus question was deplored.

Legislation for old-age pensions was demanded.

The State government was scored for lack of sympathy with Rhode Island textile strikers.

The convention was called to order in Elks' Auditorium at 10 o'clock with 198 voting delegates present, as shown by the count on the Governorship nomination. Alternates brought the attendance up to 300.

Judge Mortimer A. Sullivan of Newport was made permanent chairman and Senator John J. Barry of Central Falls permanent secretary.

PACIFISTS' THEORY GONE, SAYS PERSHING

Claire stepped into court yesterday and obtained a decree from Captain James McKowen, New York booking agent, reputed as having an income of $12,000 a year. Still Claire asked no alimony. She was given custody of the child. The grounds for suit was desertion.

Just before starting for Massachusetts, Claire called on her friend Judge LaBuy of Maxwell street station, remarked she had never been in a cell and so was given a ride in the patrol and then locked behind the bars for a brief period.

ever, were said still to be well within the neutral zone.

Smyrna, Oct. 3. (By the Associated Press).—Embarkation of the Greek and Armenian refugees from Smyrna has been stopped by the Turks, the time limit set by Mustapha Kemal Pasha having expired.

Approximately 200,000 persons have been evacuated, and those remaining will be deported to the interior, whether men, women or children.

The Turkish military today began a house-to-house search for those liable to deportation.

The Christian consul asked the authorities to grant exemptions for a handful of Greeks whom he regarded as indispensable, particularly employes of the city water works who remained at their posts throughout the crisis at his request and who are now unable to depart.

A similar request was made by the American Relief Committee on behalf of the Greeks who have been employed in their refugee bakeries, but the reply of the local authorities in each case was "no exceptions can be made."

Allies United at Mudania Parley

Mudania, Oct. 2.—As the armistice conference opened here today it was declared the allied commanders, in pursuance of an agreement reached at Constantinople last night, would stand united against any unreasonable demands of the Turks.

Those in attendance were General Harington, representing Great Britain; Ismet Pasha, Kemalist commander on the western front; Hamid Bey, Kemalist envoy to Constantinople, and Henri Franklin Bouillon, pacification emissary of the British, French and Italians.

It is declared one demand upon the Turks will be for allied occupation of eastern Thrace pending the actual peace conference to follow the truce parleys.

On the other hand, the Turks demand:

1—Turkish gendarmerie shall aid the allies in policing Thrace.

2—Establishing of Turkish civil administration in eastern Thrace.

3—Evacuation of Thrace by Greek troops within eight days after the armistice is signed.

4—Occupation of the eastern bank of the Maritza River by allied troops to protect eastern Thrace from Greek attack.

Moscow, Oct. 3 (By the Associated Press).—Soviet Russia's aims are all toward peace, General Daniloff, chief commissar of the Red Army General Staff, told the correspondent today in denying reports that Soviet artillery was being sent to aid the Turks.

"Because of the belligerent attitude of various countries regarding Russia," he said, "we must always stand ready and prepare against attack, but so far as the Greco-Turkish war is concerned, we made absolutely no preparations."

Harding Will Omit All "Threatening Gestures"

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Official announcement was made at the White House after today's Cabinet meeting that the United States will indulge in no threatening gestures, either diplomatically or in a military way in the dangerous Near East situation which is in evolution in eastern Thrace.

It was stated on behalf of President Harding that those who expect the government figuratively to mount a platform and indulge in loud language, whether they be church interests or otherwise, are doomed to disappointment.

It was agreed to co-operate in an effort to insure proper protection for the foreign business men in Turkey in the decisions of the Peace Conference.

FRANCE PROBES RUM-RUNNING OFF COAST

Paris, Oct. 3.—Albert Sarraut, Minister of Colonies, today ordered an official investigation of American reports that the French islands of Miquelon and St. Pierre, off the Newfoundland coast, were used as a base of operations by "bootleggers" shipping large quantities of contraband whiskey into the United States.

"These reports that rum-runners are utilizing French islands in the North Atlantic as a base of supply shock me," declared Sarraut. "The insinuations that France is profiteering from the selling of alcoholic drink to 'bootleggers' anger me."

The islands have been a financial burden to France. The cost of maintaining them this year is estimated at a third of a million of francs. France has retained them only for their harbors and the fact that they furnish a base of supplies ... ...sels of Brittany fishermen.

Welcome, Bankers
Lawson's Last Chapter
Some Wise Insurance
Greek Scapegoat Wanted

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright 1922, Star Co.

Bankers of America, nearly ten thousand, are gathered in New York to talk. What interests them interests everybody, for banks are barometers of business and prosperity. Bankers read with interest the day they arrived that New York had raised its real estate assessments above ten billions and a half. What a ransom that city could pay and WOULD pay, if a flock of Asiatic TNT-carrying flying machines released from apparently peaceful merchantmen should demand it. It's a prosperous city and growing.

Lewis L. Clarke, one of the youngest big bankers, eating his lunch and reading an advertisement of the Chemical Bank, held out the advertisement, saying: "That again confirms J. Pierpont Morgan's statement that it doesn't pay to sell the United States short."

The advertisement showed that in 1833 a piece of land was sold in the then upper distant part of New York city for $9,358.07. That sum was deposited in the Chemical Bank. That happens to be the piece of land on which the bankers in the Commodore Hotel are now holding their convention. It is now assessed by the city for $9,500,000, just a little more than one thousand times what it sold for in 1833, eighty-nine years ago. If you want your grandchildren to be rich, buy real estate wisely in New York, Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Seattle, San Francisco, Syracuse, Atlanta, Rochester—any first-class growing American city.

The banking business is a big one, and without wise banking, liberal credit based on good judgment, business would be stagnant. There are 30,499 banks in the country, 8,917 National banks, the others, State banks or private banks.

Among them the banks have resources close to fifty billion dollars. That is five times what Europe owns us, so we are solvent, anyhow.

Another, perhaps the last chapter in frenzied finance, has been written. Thomas W. Lawson, once the gaddly of Wall street, selling his home that cost millions to satisfy his creditors.

"If you fight the 'big men,' and wait long enough, they will get you, it is said. They seem to have got Lawson, but he did good work making the people think, whatever his stock selling side issues may have been. And whether they get him or not doesn't matter. Life is short.

Mr. Carry, new president of the Pullman Sleeping Car Company, arranges life insurance for 53,000 men and women, employed by his company, without cost to the workers. That combines real progress and common sense. If more big industrialists devoted to the happiness of their employes one-half the attention they devote to the happiness of stockholders, business would be better, and strike troubles fewer in the United States.

A good sheep farmer thinks about the welfare of his sheep, not merely about the wool and mutton he can get. An intelligent employer should think of the health, happiness and contentment of his employes.

The Greeks, looking for a scapegoat, say the Allies sacrificed Greece.

The fact is that the Greeks sacrificed themselves when they let themselves be led by an asinine king, throwing aside Venizelos, a real statesman. The Allies would not have "sacri-

Little Stories of Real Life

The Want Ad pages of The Boston American are rife with life and pulsate with incidents.

They record the hopes and aims of thousands. The employer speaks to the unemployed. The unemployed addresses the employer. The man of business tells what he has for sale. The citizen tells of what he wants.

There's a wonderful community of interest represented there and there's profit for those who read them regularly.

If this reminds you of something you want, then turn and read. If something you have for sale, then write an ad and note how quickly you'll get results.

SCREAMS ATTRACT POLICE BOAT

Young Woman and Companion Taken From Craft Anchored Off City Point

Police aboard the Police Boat Edwin U. Curtis investigated.

They found evidence of gay revelry aboard a yacht anchored a short distance from South Boston Yacht Club and took ashore a girl giving the name of Catherine McGonigle and Warren Trent, who said he was married and lived at No. 761 Broadway, Chelsea.

They permitted the couple to go to a taxi, believing that everything was all right except that Miss McGonigle had been frightened by a sudden pitching of the yacht.

The couple got into the machine. As they did the girl sort of half swooned and grasped her head. Neither seemed able to give the driver an address.

Patrolman Joseph Kiley arrived. After brief questioning he took both to City Point police station.

In South Boston Court today the girl gave several addresses. Finally she said her home was at No. 12 Lexington avenue, Charlestown. Both were charged with intoxication. She was placed on probation. The man was released.

CHARGES HE WAS DRUGGED, ROBBED

John Vassil, a salesman of No. 75 E Street, charged in South Boston Court today he had been poisoned by moonshine and robbed of more than $1,000 in the establishment of Dominick Cregolonis at No. 273 Fourth street. He accused the proprietor and Joseph Dusevitz. Judge Logan acquitted them.

Vassil said he saw a crap game in the store and was invited to take part but refused, whereupon a player taunted him with the remark that he had no money. He said he replied he had more money than the entire crowd, displayed his $1,000, was induced to take a drink and collapsed. He was told to go to bed in the next room and while he lay there helpless he said he felt someone take his money.

WIFE SLAYER WILL PLEAD INSANITY

Portland, Me., Oct. 3.—Insanity will be the plea of Samuel Lane Cousins, charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Susan Louise Cousins on April 17 at their home at Westbrook. The trial began today before Judge Sanborn in the Superior Court. The accused man was brought back from the Augusta State Hospital early this month, when a report was received that he was not insane, as he claimed to be. He is still nursing a wound on his wrist, alleged to have been made by him with a razor when his wife was shot to death. He appeared to take little interested in the selection of jurors.

SAY WOMAN PLANNED KILLING OF DOCTOR

New York, Oct. 3.—Mrs. Lillian Raizen, confessed slayer of Dr. Abraham Glickstein, Brooklyn physician, planned the killing last November in Florida, immediately before she came here and shot the doctor, witnesses in that State recently testified before a special commission. The killing of Dr. Glickstein was the beginning of a triple tragedy. His mother fell dead sobbing over his bier, and a few weeks later his widow jumped from a window of their apartment, killing herself. Mrs. Raizen has never been brought to trial, alienists having disagreed over her mental condition.

Lured and Robbed by Mystery Girl

Found Wandering on the Common, Suffering From Effects of Drug

SIMON DAVIS

Youth of 17 says he was walking on Tremont street when a young woman asked him to go to her home. She gave him a green liquid to drink. Then he was ejected, semi-conscious. At the City Hospital the nature of the drug given him puzzled the doctors.

HUNT GIRL WHO LURED YOUTH FOR ROBBERY

Was it the gold watch in his vest and the $45 in his pockets?

Or was it his downy complexion, his handsome face and his rather inexperienced eyes?

The police do not know yet whether the soft-voiced, blue-eyed siren who was responsible for the present plight of 17-year-old Simon Davis of Stanford street, West End, was what is known in police talk as a "jack-roller" or whether she was one of those vampires you read about.

Simon, who appears not to be greatly worried over his adventure, is being fussed over by nurses at the City Hospital.

His version of the alleged lure and drugging is blank and ingenuous.

POLICE NOT SURE.

But here again the police are not sure.

Is David really as Simple Simon as he appears?

Half an hour before midnight the young man was found wandering about in the middle of Boston Common, gazing vacantly at the trees and benches and muttering incoherently to himself.

A passerby who noticed him notified a patrolman and the officer called a patrol wagon which took the lad to the City Hospital. After an examination physicians announced that he was under the influence of some drug, the exact nature of which they could not determine.

At first he could tell nothing of himself. A little later he managed to say that his name was Simon Davis, and that he is seventeen years

SAID SHE WAS AFRAID.

He said that he had been walking along Tremont street in the middle of the afternoon when a woman, apparently twenty-one or twenty-two years old, came up and spoke to him. She said that she wanted to go to her home on Tremont street, in the South End, he continued, but that she was afraid to go alone, and wanted him to escort her there.

Following her into the house, he was led into a nicely furnished side room and given a seat. The girl went into another room, to return a moment later with a glass of some green, sparkling liquid in her hand. Telling him that this was a special kind of Italian wine, she gave it to him.

Davis drank it. Then his senses gradually slipped away from him. The next thing he knew, he found himself out in the middle of the Common, wandering about under the trees, faint and sleepy. How long he had been there he did not know.

RUN OUT OF GAS, ELOPEMENT IS OFF

Lawrence, Oct. 3.—They started out to seek the bluebird of happiness, but they ran out of gas.

The police of Springfield noticed a battered auto halted before a gas station, and two young men arguing with the proprietor. They were asking for credit for enough gas to get back to Lawrence.

In the car were two frightened girls. All four were placed under arrest. At the station they said they were Robert Pasquill, eighteen, of Willow street; John Lyons, nineteen, of Park street; Florence MacPherson, sixteen, of Dolan court, and Irene Fauchette, seventeen, of Warren street, Lawrence.

The Lawrence police said the four were employes of the Arlington Mills at Lawrence, and had been missing since Saturday. According to the story told at Springfield, John was betrothed to Irene and Robert to Florence, and the affair had been planned as an elopement.

COURT INTERPRETER GETS JAIL SENTENCE

John Adamovicze of No. 122 Bowen street, South Boston, a court interpreter, charged with impersonating a lawyer and with the larceny of $50 from Lucy Karevitz of No. 93 Sixth street, South Boston, was found guilty in South Boston Court by Judge Logan. He was fined $50 on the impersonation charge and sentenced to one month on the charge of larceny. He appealed both sentences.

CHASE MAN IN LYNN ON CHILD'S CHARGES

Caught after a chase of several blocks in Lynn, in which a score or more persons took part, Orrison A. Hutchinson, forty-three, of Milford, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, after having attempted to entice the six-year-old daughter of John Sullivan from her home in Lynn. The child said that the man offered her some pennies to go with him to High Rock, on the outskirts of the city.

STILLMAN OPENS NEW BATTLE

Banker Opposes Confirmation of Referee Gleason's Report Favoring Wife

New York, Oct. 3.—Another legal battle in the divorce action brought by James A. Stillman, formerly president of the National City Bank, against Anna Urquhart Stillman, decided in Mrs. Stillman's favor by Referee Daniel J. Gleason of Poughkeepsie, will be fought in the Supreme Court at White Plains tomorrow.

Joseph Morschauser, Supreme Court justice, signed an order at White Plains directing the attorneys for Mr. Stillman and John E. Mack, guardian for Baby Guy Stillman, whose paternity was questioned by Mr. Stillman, to show cause before him why the report of the referee should not be confirmed.

In Mr. Stillman's action he named Fred Beauvais, an Indian guide, as the father of Baby Guy, but Referee Gleason held that Mr. Stillman was Guy's father and that the child was legitimate.

It was reported today that the attorney for Mr. Stillman would fight to have the report set aside and that if this were denied there would be an appeal to the Appellate Division and that the case might be carried to the Court of Appeals.

Cockran to Speak

W. Bourke Cockran of New York will be the orator of the day at the municipal exercises upon Columbus Day.

VICTIM OF MURDER AND HER SLAYER

Refusing to wed a second time, because her first marital experience had ended in the divorce court, Miss Willett was killed in the kitchen of her home by a special officer, who then committed suicide.

LEONA WILLETT

CHARLES HAGGERTY

Middleboro, Oct. 3.—Leona Willett, twenty-one years old, who was shot to death by Special Officer Charles F. Haggerty, after which the murderer took his own life, was slain because she refused to make a second venture into the troublesome sea of matrimony.

PUBLIC TO BUY AT COST

Fuel to Be Distributed in Various Parts of Boston Under New Plan

The City of Boston is going into the coal business to prevent profiteering and possibility of shortage.

Councillor Lane.

Six coal stations, where coal and wood will be sold, are to be established, as a result of the appropriation of $250,000 made by Mayor Curley and approved by the City Council, for that purpose.

As to the plan of distribution, it is likely that the Mayor will follow the system used by Mayor Peters in 1919, when $150,000 worth of coal was bought by the city and distributed to the needy in the congested and poor sections of the city, at cost, plus only the expense of handling. At that time city teams did the carting and distribution.

Councillor Gilbody.

All that is needed now is the signing of the order by the Mayor. Three members of the council were appointed by President David J. Brickley to serve with the Mayor on the committee for the distribution of the coal. They were Councillors Gilbody, Watson and Lane.

There Is No Royal Road to a Successful Life

C. M. SCHWAB,
Chairman of the Board of Directors Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who rose from a steel worker to a leader in the industry.

One of a series of inspirational articles written especially for the Boston newspapers by America's most successful men.

IF I were asked to say the most important things that lead to a successful life, I should say that, first of all, was integrity—unimpeachable integrity. No man can ever do anything of any great value in life and have the confidence and approval of his fellow men or be successful in his undertakings with other business men if he doesn't have the reputation of being a man of honor and integrity.

That is the very foundation of a successful life. With this to start upon, then the other is going to be easy going and easy following. You can make up your mind to do one of two things: You can have a good time in life or you can have a successful life, but you can't have both. You have got to make up your mind at the start which of the two you are going to have. There is no royal road to a successful life, as there is no royal road to learning. It has got to be hard knocks, morning, noon and night, and fixity of purpose. Never has there been a time in the history of the world when so much opportunity offered for the leading of a successful life as to-day.

C M Schwab

This is first of a series of signed articles to appear daily in the Boston American. Tomorrow Gen. John J. Pershing will contribute some sensible suggestions on "How to Succeed."

4 FISHERMEN TO SEEK NOVA SCOTIA TITLE

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 3.—Four schooners, instead of five, will battle for the Nova Scotia fishing fleet championship off Halifax next Saturday and Monday, the Lunenburg knockabout Alcala having decided to withdraw.

While the Alcala is recognized as one of the finest of the province bankers, it was generally thought she would have little chance to win from the bowsprit vessels, which are credited with being able to lay closer to the wind.

GIRL IS MEMBER OF B. U. SCHOOL CABINET

A girl has been chosen one of the five members of the student cabinet at the Boston University School of Business Administration for the current term. She is Miss Zella Tortolani, '24, of Providence. Membership in the cabinet is based upon high scholarship and participation in school affairs. Other cabinet members are Sterling W. Greene, of Watertown, president of the sophomore class; John J. Murray, '25, of Cambridge; Stanley Parker, '24, of North Adams, and Paul Russlow, '24, of Randolph, Vt.

The four contestants will be: the international champion, the Bluenose, the Maska and Margaret K. Smith, "dark horses," in that they are new this year, and the Canadia, whose adjusted trim and lessened sail are expected to improve her performances of last Fall.

TONIC DRINKS FAIL TO FOIL VOLSTEAD

If you ever plan a little dinner party, and find that the enthusiasm and life of your guests is lagging a bit, for lack of some effective stimulant, and you haven't got a thing in the house that will help matters any—

Just step around the corner to a drug store and buy a bottle of medicinal cocktails.

For one dollar you can buy a nice, tall bottle of Mucu-Tone, a tonic devised by the United Drug Co., which contains 10 per cent. of alcohol, and complies with all Federal and State prohibition statutes.

A couple or three spoonfuls in the bottom of a glass—and away goes that tired feeling, back comes your appetite, and everything is lovely.

BUT DON'T FORGET.

But in your enthusiasm for a before-dinner cocktail, don't get the idea that Mucu-Tone can be served in large quantities, as a wine. That isn't being done—more than once. For it seems that there are so many other things in this tonic besides alcohol that any large dose instantly brings on sickness.

In other words, Mucu-Tone is a wonderful tonic, but as a beverage, it is more or less left-handed.

Prohibition Director Elmer Potter explains it as follows:

"It is true that many products on the market today contain alcohol, sometimes up to 20 per cent. But woe to the man who tries to indulge in a good, old-fashioned drunk. He will take about half a glassful and will be the sickest man you ever saw.

"These medicines are so medicated that it is absolutely necessary that they contain alcohol to keep them intact. Without it they would explode."

Dr. Merrill, of the United Drug Co., says the same thing.

WOULD BE MADE SICK.

"Just because the cover on the box says that the contents contain 10 or 20 per cent. of alcohol, it does not follow that one may use the article as an intoxicant. He would be made sick long before he could get into a state of intoxication, if, indeed, he were able to take enough."

Mucu-Tone, he said, contains the following ingredients besides alcohol:

Sarsaparilla root, cubebs, potassium iodide, sassafras bark, bitter orange peel, cascara sagrada and nux vomica. Beef, Iron and Wine which is 18 per cent. alcohol, contains extracts of beef, iron and ammonium citrate, syrup, water, compound spirit of orange, ammonia water and sherry wine.

Yes—a couple of spoonsful is one thing, but a whole glass full is another.

YOU WILL GET SICK INSTEAD OF KICK

TONICS, NOT BEVERAGES

These medicinal preparations contain ten and nineteen per cent. alcohol, yet comply with all prohibition statutes. They are so prepared that use as a drink, instead of as directed, produces unfortunate results on him who would outwit Volstead.

The deed places in the hands of the National Woman's party, as the gift of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, president, the buildings and grounds known as the "Old Capitol" in Washington, situated opposite the Capitol of the United States, under the following conditions:

Second, the Woman's party "shall confine and limit to women the right to hold offices or position of any kind or to receive any salary in the said organization."

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

ficed" him, for he would not have given them the chance. Now the Greeks are going to try another king, apparently. If they do, they will get some more lessons.

Poincare of France tells England she can have peace now "if she really wants it," which looks like a slap at "our dear ally."

One business man said to another in a burst of frankness, "For what I am thinking about you now you would have me put in jail."

The Allies of Europe don't say that to each other, but that shows they are thinking.

The Academy of Science in Paris is studying a "jumping stick" from a village near Nantes. That stick puzzles scientists and excites the superstitious. About three feet long, half an inch thick, it suddenly, without apparent cause, with no wind stirring, leaps several feet in the air, or moves shivering along the ground.

Not long ago, in France, a man with a stick like that could impose on the credulous most profitably, appealing to their superstition. Now the Academy of Science knows and will show that the jumping is due to a trick or some bygonmetric freak.

REFUSED TO MARRY, SLAIN

Miss Willett had been married before. She secured a divorce six months ago from Carl Moore of Plymouth, and was granted the right to resume her maiden name.

Haggerty, jealous by nature, had paid ardent court to her ever since she returned to Middleboro, where she lived with her parents at No. 12 Montello street. He was deeply enamoured of her, and begged her to marry him.

Although the girl was fond of him, her one experience with marriage had made her sceptical about it. She did not dare repeat the venture, fearing that her second marriage might prove as unhappy as her first. So she refused Haggerty.

Then Haggerty, rendered half insane by brooding over the affair, thought of killing her. His homicidal idea was strengthened when she went to Boston to seek work. During her absence it was rumored about the town that she was receiving the attentions of another man. Haggerty became desperate.

Miss Millett returned to Middleboro Sunday night. Haggerty met her and took her for a ride in the sidecar of his motorcycle. The two seemed happy together, but after their return she told her mother that he had declared he would shoot her if he had a gun with him.

Her mother worried somewhat over this, as she had heard that he had told other persons he was going to "get Lena." The father, Lewis Willett, and the girl, however, did not take much stock in the threats, thinking that Haggerty would never actually carry them out.

Yesterday morning, Haggerty went to two stores and tried to buy a revolver. Neither would sell him one, however, and so he went to the police station and took a gun from the desk of Acting Chief Rogers. Since he was a special officer, nothing was thought of this at the station.

Then he went to the Willett home, killed the girl and himself.

PICKING MAN TO SUCCEED EDWARDS

Eight widely-known officers of the regular army are discussed as the possible successors to Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, who will retire at his own request on December 1 as commander of the First Corps Area.

Two are major-generals. They are Harry Hale and David C. Shanks. The other six are brigadier-generals: Robert L. Howze, stationed at El Paso, Texas; Andrew W. Brewster, at Washington; Edward N. Lewis, with the Second Division in Texas; George R. Duncan, Fort Omaha, Neb.; Ernest Hinds, on duty at Washington, and William Lassiter, also at Washington. All have been named by President Harding for promotion to the rank of major-general.

Major-General Hale, who is now temporary corps commander at New York, has seen service with New England troops, having been stationed at Boston and at Camp Devens. Major-General Shanks was corps commander while General Edwards was on duty at Camp Dix and in Kentucky after the war. General Howze served as chief of staff of the 26th Division when he was a colonel. This was prior to the departure of the Y. D. to France.

Society to Take Over Gown Shop in Aid of Charity, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

EVERYBODY knows of Mrs. J. "Reggie" Foster's cleverness at getting things done. No sooner had she arrived back in town for the Winter than she was asked to get together a group of young society saleswomen for the three days when the smart set takes over Mr. Jays' gown shop on Temple place.

It's all in aid of the Children's Hospital, and Mr. Jay has offered that one-fourth of the entire proceeds taken in by the shop during the three days will be turned over for this worthy charity. Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Mrs. Bayard Warren and Mrs. Philip Weld are among the prominent sponsors for this clever project, which takes place on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster—she was formerly Miss Frances Hoar—spent the Summer along the North Shore, where they ranked as leaders among the younger married set. Mrs. "Reggie" is seen here as she was snapped at a recent sporting event held along the Shore. She looked exceptionally smart in the crepe tonne coat-dress with its unique Egyptian figures. It will be remembered that following their marriage at the capital a year ago last June the popular Harvard '11 man and his bride went on a long wedding journey to the Orient, returning to these shores only last Spring. For the present the young couple are living on Myrtle street.

MRS. REGINALD FOSTER

Mrs. Reginald Foster (Frances Hoar) is back in town again after spending the Summer on the North Shore, where this picture was snapped during a recent sporting event.

SPEAKING of Mrs. Foster reminds me that her sister, Miss Louisa Hoar, has returned to Washington to spend the Winter with her mother, Mrs. Frederick Gillett, wife of the Speaker of the House, and Mr. Gillett.

Vivacious Louisa Hoar—she is petite and blonde—spent the Summer in New England. A portion of the hot season she was in Maine at York Harbor with the Speaker and Mrs. Gillett, later on coming down to the North Shore for a series of visits.

All society knows what talented dancers the Hoar sisters are, and whenever anyone is in charge of a charity function, he or she usually asks them to contribute to the program.

MR. AND MRS. MARK ROGERS WENDELL of Exeter street are among the Bostonians staying at the Curtis Hotel in Lenox.

ALSO sojourning in the Berkshires from Boston are Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield of Marlboro street, for whom Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. de Gersdorff of New York gave a dinner party at their Stockbridge villa the other night.

Mrs. Frederick J. Bradlee of Boston (Josephine de Gersdorff) spent a good portion of the Summer months with Mr. and Mrs. de Gersdorff, who are her parents. During her visit with them, Mrs. Bradlee sang at several charity affairs held in the Berkshires, when the loveliness of her voice aroused a good deal of favorable comment. It was Mrs. Bradlee who played a leading part in "Why Not?" presented last March in aid of the Infants' Hospital.

NO candidate ever had a more ardent "stumper" — or should one say "stumperess"—than William A. Gaston, whose daughter, Miss Hope Gaston, did all in her power to help her dad win the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Now that the strain of the primaries is past, I presume that Miss Gaston considered herself entitled to a bit of diversion, and I hear that she is the house guest of the R. Livingston Beeckmans at Newport. A few days ago Mr. Beeckman gave a luncheon in honor of Miss Gaston and Edward Bangs, also of Boston, another house guest.

There was, by the way, considerable activity manifested at Newport over the past week-end. There was quite a tennis crowd about the Casino, which is to be open this year as late as November 1. Golf also attracted a goodly number of Summer colonists, and the courses of the Newport Country Club and the Ocean links were generously dotted with devotees of the sport.

Grafton D. Cushing has closed his Newport estate, and is returning shortly to his Winter home here on Chestnut street.

GERALD LIVINGSTON HOYT has left his North Shore place at Ipswich, and has gone on to Stanisburg, N. Y., to open his Winter home there. He will be joined later by Mrs. Hoyt.

"MR. ISADORA" ADMITS HE'S GREAT POET

New York, Oct. 3.—Isadora Duncan and her young Russian husband, Serge Essenine, following an examination at Ellis Island, were released and admitted to the United States. They were questioned about their alleged activities with the Communists of Russia.

"It's absurd that they should hold me up as an emissary of the Soviets—I who am an artist, not a politician," she said.

"I didn't mind how much they dragged my political views around, but when they talked about my art I wanted to tear the place open."

"There was one of them," she began to mimic, a deliberate condescending speech with a nasal twang, "he said to me: 'I understand you call yourself a classical dancer, don't you?'"

She exhaled disgust at the remembrance.

"That's what my imitators call themselves!"

FIRST LEGAL HUBBY.

She drew herself up proudly. "As for me, I am a dancer! And I told him so. Then he asked: 'What kind of a dance would you say you were?'"

She was almost overpowered as she considered this. Isadora's emotions are never feeble affairs.

"You might as well have asked Rodin what kind of a sculptor he was," she said.

Then her young husband wandered into the room.

"This is Serge Alexandrovitch Esenine," she said. "He is a genius. He will do much for the young poets of America."

ADMITS HE'S GREAT.

It appears the young man, who is Isadora's first legal husband, and who stood immaculate in a gray suit and cream-colored spats, is a "peasant poet." In his verse, according to Hellens, his translator, "he has the brutal quality of a countryman, yet he does not offend. He sings his likes and dislikes, he shouts them in print, he spits them and he purrs them."

MURDER PROBE IS SCORED BY MILLS GIRL

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 3.—Flat failure has been the result of the official inquiry into the puzzling Hall-Mills murder mystery.

The trend of the official mind was shown when little Charlotte Mills was taken from her classroom in the senior high school and for the third or fourth time summoned before Prosecutor Beekman and Detective David. The girl recently wrote to Governor Edwards, complaining of the lack of action of the officials.

She emerged from the conference trembling with rage and said:

"They haven't done a thing, and they don't know anything. I'm tired of being dragged over here to answer silly questions while they show no desire to go out and work. I told them I had got a woman lawyer, Florence North, to protect me. Oh, we had a hot time. They tried to haul me out for writing to the Governor."

The authorities are now endeavoring to trace papers taken from the Rev. Edward W. Hall's private cabinet in the rectory four hours after the discovery of his body.

Here's a worthy brother to Lipton's Tea and Coffee
Thomas Lipton

"WHEN I can produce a perfect cocoa, I'll make it" said Sir Thomas J. Lipton. That was years ago.

Today those conditions have been met. An entirely new process has been devised. This process does three vital things to improve the food value and flavor of cocoa.

It removes the tasteless, useless shells; it retains more of the rich nutritious cocoa butter. It thoroughly roasts and blends the cocoa beans, giving Lipton's a flavor and fragrance that is superior to any other cocoa.

You'll find this new and better Lipton Cocoa richer, distinct in taste, and with more of that chocolate quality than any cocoa you have tasted, and it actually costs you less, because only half the usual quantity need be used.

It is called Lipton's Instant Cocoa because it dissolves instantly.

Look for the signature of Sir Thomas J. Lipton on every package of tea, coffee or cocoa you buy—then

AGED "WOMAN PONZI" STARVING IN JAIL; TOOK IN $300,000

FASTS TO OBTAIN LIBERTY

Authorities Search for the Money Given Her After Glowing Promises

Pomeroy, O., Oct. 3.—Mrs. Susan Kraus, sixty-three, who, with her husband, sixty-eight, is held in county jail on a charge of embezzlement and alleged by county officials to have mulcted Pomeroy people out of more than $300,000 by promises of returns rivalling those promised by Ponzi, the Boston "financier," today began the fourth day of her self-imposed fast.

"If they would only let her out of here," the husband said this morning, "she would tell them all."

Meanwhile the grand jury was to convene today and begin a rigid investigation of the financial transactions of the couple covering the past twelve years. Scores of citizens were ready to go before the inquisitors and tell how, when promised returns of from 10 to 30 per cent. for their money, they had entrusted large sums to the woman and that in many cases the interest had been paid in advance.

At the same time the United States Federal Court had under way proceedings in bankruptcy designed to show what assets, if any, were left to meet the rapidly mounting claims. It was expected that a commissioner would be appointed to prove the claims and that an examination of the woman would be ordered.

"Sylpho-Nathol makes healthful cleanness"

"Cousin Elizabeth took a Ph.D. at Wellesley. She's so scientific and scholarly you feel that every statement she makes is backed by facts. She thoroughly approves of Sylpho-Nathol. In fact, she's advising its use in her Welfare work in Boston.

"The way in which housekeepers have come to realize the importance of sanitation is really wonderful," she said. 'Such measures are very necessary to community health. There would be less risk of influenza and other contagious diseases if Sylpho-Nathol were used in every home.'

"'All the ordinary cleaning in the world won't get rid of germs. They must be destroyed, and that's what Sylpho-Nathol does. It meets a great need for a really effective household disfectant and deodorant!"

Sylpho-Nathol is safe. Though 4½ times stronger than carbolic acid, it is as safe to have in the house as a cake of scouring soap.

Sylpho-Nathol is pleasant to use. It destroys odors as well as germs; but its faint, friendly, refreshing smell doesn't linger.

Sylpho-Nathol is easy to use. A teaspoonful in a quart of warm water makes a clean-smelling, pearly-gray solution that's ready for immediate use.

Sylpho-Nathol should be used regularly wherever odors may start or germs breed—down sink pipes to keep them sweet and odorless; in the garbage can to eliminate unpleasant smells and drive flies away; in the cellar to chase away damp, musty odors; and, of course, around the bathroom fixtures and as a flush for the closet bowl.

Sylpho-Nathol is a splendid healing antiseptic for cuts, burns, bruises and sprains. It is indispensable for use in the sick-room, as a safeguard against contagion.

Sylpho-Nathol comes in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c and $1.25. Most good grocers and druggists have it. If yours hasn't, he can get it easily. Just ask for it by name—"Sylpho-Nathol."

Being a Freight Trainman Was the Camel's Hump for Flapper

JUST AS EASY AS RIDING ON THE CUSHIONS

Nowadays a freight "shack" has a cinch. The only thrill left in these parts is when a fresh hobo dares you to put him off.

By THE FLAPPER.
(CARYL FIRNK.)

A brakeman has such an easy life that when he gets a vacation he goes to work, just for a change. All they do is ride around in nice, comfortable box cars, shoo an occasional tramp, who also wants a ride, and busy themselves with seeing the country. They don't even hafta pay their fare.

I was telling Henry Madden of the B. & A. that his job was the finches' fur-lined mittens, as I rode with him atop a milk train bound for Worcester.

"Not so, m'boy," he said, filling his pipe and pushing the tobacco in with his thumb. "Sometimes, p'raps, we has a cinch of it, but not always. No—he ducked under his coat to light his pipe—"not always.

BOMBS ON THE TRACK.

"Now take the time I was a brakeman on the Santa Fe durin' the Mexican trouble. They was holdin' up the trains an' robbin' the passengers somethin' awful. They'd even been puttin' bombs on the railroad track. It was anything but a joke, I may tell ya.

"Well, sir, one night the conductor comes runnin' back to where I was on the caboose, an' he says, 'Henry,' he says, 'Can ya run a in-jine?'

"'An' I says, 'Well, I don't like to brag none, but I guess I can run an in-jine as good as the next fella. Why?' says I.

"'Because,' says the conductor, 'the bandits have shot up the engineer and fireman an' I can't run a Ford, leave alone a locomotive.'

REGULAR MOVIE STUNT.

"So it was up to Henry to bring the ship safe to port. An' I may say it was as hot a run as I've ever had. There was one stretch the bandits was chasin' after me on their horses keepin' right abreast of the cab. We got out o' the danger zone along towards mornin', but we was riddled with bullets somethin' awful. It were a close shave, m'boy, a close shave."

At this point Pete, the brakeman from the front end of the train, came back to tell Henry that there was a delegation of hobos riding the bumpers on their way to their annual convention. So Henry wearily picked himself up and made his way down the ladder.

"The lad's had some excitin' experiences down in New Mexico, hasn't he," I said to Pete.

"Who, him?" grinned Pete, pointing after the retreating figure of Henry.

"He been tellin' you some o' his wild tales? Why, say, he read those out'n a book called 'Twenty Years on the Road.' We read 'em out loud to each other when we all get together in the cahoose.

"Why (Pete chuckled to himself) that apple knocker ain't ever been out o' Massachusetts."

$150 Wet Fine

Edgar E. Pauley of No. 173 Lowell street, Wakefield, was fined $150 today by Federal Judge Morton, following his pleading guilty to a federal indictment charging him with possessing liquor and property for the manufacture of liquor.

GIRL IN AUTO LEAPS; POLICE CALLED OUT

Police of two stations, 5 and 10, were excited today when they received reports of a fusillade of bullets near Columbus avenue and Dartmouth streets.

A riot squad from the East Dedham street station hurrying to the point found a colored girl sitting in an automobile talking to a white girl standing beside the machine.

The colored girl said that the two had been riding together and the white girl wished to get out. For a joke she speeded the machine instead of stopping, and the girl leaped from the car. The noise like shooting, she said, was simply the back-firing of her engine.

The number plates of the car showed that it was the property of Maude L. Mitchell, No. 14 Newbury street, but inside the car was another set of number plates which the police are investigating.

The police of the Roxbury Crossing station said that they had detained the car, until the girls explained, and then had notified the East Dedham street division. Neither of the girls was detained as the police considered their explanation satisfactory.

BOSTON-BOUND SCHOONER FLOATED

Peterhead, Scotland, Oct. 3.—The American steamship Quaker City, with a cargo of pigiron, which ran ashore on the rocks near Cruden, Aberdeenshire, on Sunday during a heavy storm, was refloated today. The Quaker City was on her way from Leith to Boston.

EX-WIFE SAYS: "I DISCOVERED VALENTINO"

From rags to wealth, fame and the adulation of beautiful women—such is the romantic career of Rudolpho Valentino, the great screen lover.

Or at least so it is according to the tale of Jean Acker, divorced wife of the "Sheik" of the films.

And it was the love, of a woman that gave him his all.

"Rudolpho was only a professional dancer doing extra bits in the studios at Los Angeles when I first met him at Pauline Frederick's home," began the woman spurned, as she sat in a Boston theatre dressing room.

"He had but one suit of clothes to his name and that was patched at the elbow.

"I do not want to appear conceited, but it was through me that Rudolpho first got his real chance in the films. I introduced him to my friends, stars in the various companies. At first no one could see him. They all admitted he was good looking and had a wonderful appearance, but that was all. I worked for him.

"Many of my friends disliked Rudolpho, and consequently our meetings were secret. Many times I would drive to some lonesome spot in the road and pick him up.

"Often we went to parties at the homes of different stars. I liked the one at Charlie Chaplin's home the best. Charlie is such a big, overgrown kid. We'd play blind man's buff, charades and kid's games like that.

"All I have left of those good times now are memories. I hold nothing against Rudolpho. He was wonderful to me until he became a star. Then I wasn't good enough for him.

MAYOR HYLAN TO AID DEMOCRATIC TICKET

New York, Oct. 3 (By International News Service)—Mayor John F. Hylan announced today that he would support the Democratic ticket placed in nomination by the Syracuse convention last week. The Mayor's announcement follows:

"The Democratic platform contains many distinctly progressive planks for which I have fought. The candidates are pledged to carry out the provisions and planks of that platform and, therefore, I will support the ticket nominated on that platform."

Optician Would Like to See All Papers Green

WILLIAM DODSON HUNT, an optician of long standing, of No. 7 Water street, would like to see all of Boston's papers printed on green paper such as the American's green edition.

"White paper reflects heat waves," he says, "but green absorbs them, and is therefore restful to the eye.

"There is no question but that people would be much benefitted if all our papers were printed on a greenish-tinted sheet, because green is nature's own color. If more people were "put to pasture" instead of spending most of their lives in office buildings, fewer glasses would have to be worn.

"Greenish-colored spectacles are often worn because they give people's eyes the green that nature meant us to see a great deal of."

CHARGE PLOT IN U. S. AGAINST OBREGON

Mexico City, Oct. 2 (By International News Service)—Mexican newspapers this morning published stories under the sensational headline, "United States Government Trying to Encourage Revolution in Mexico."

According to the newspapers in question, a secret bulletin dealing with Mexican affairs has been issued by M. Elting Hanna, chief of the Mexican division of the United States State Department, which, it is claimed by the newspapers, shows partiality to the enemies of the Obregon administration.

The papers claim, furthermore that there is reason to believe that Francisco Murguia, a Mexican rebel leader, who is said to be in Texas at present, communicated secretly to Secretary of Interior Fall plans for the overthrow of the Obregon government.

Secretary Fall described the report as a "damned lie," and said he knew nothing of Murguia's revolutionary activities in the United States.

BELASCO PAYS FORTUNE TO HOPWOOD

It is claimed in the theatrical profession that Avery Hopwood, co-author with Mary Roberts Rinehart of "The Bat," now on view at the Wilbur Theatre, leads all playwrights for gross receipts on the plays he has written.

Hopwood also has the distinction of receiving checks from the most important managers and producers in the theatrical world. David Belasco contributed large-sized checks weekly for "The Gold Diggers." The Selwyns paid Hopwood large sums for "Fair and Warmer." A. H. Woods kept his bookkeepers busy sending royalty checks for various Hopwood farces. Wagenhals & Kemper have an office full of cancelled checks for "Seven Days" and now are filling another office with Hopwood checks for "The Bat" and their newest success, "Why Men Leave Home," which is crowding the Morosco Theatre, New York.

Belasco paid Hopwood $100,000 for 556 performances of "The Gold Diggers" in New York during its run at the Lyceum Theatre. In one week last season Wagenhals & Kemper with six companies of "The Bat," made a profit of $25,000 for Hopwood. As Hopwood and Rinehart receive a percentage of the gross takings, their returns were conservatively speaking, $12,000, and as they split 50-50, one can readily see that this clever pair of writers did not have to worry about meals.

Other Theatres

STATE THEATRE—Delightful and highly entertaining was "The Old Homestead," the masterful picturization of Denman Thompson's greatest American play, which was presented at Loew's State Theatre yesterday. Theodore Roberts makes a wonderful interpretation of the character of Uncle Josh.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—Cecil B. De Mille's great production "Manslaughter" caught the eye of the large audience in fine style, when it was presented at Loew's Orpheum Theatre yesterday. The cast is headed by Thomas Meighan, assisted by Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson. This story is one concerning a capricious, wealthy girl who causes the death of a motor policeman while speeding in her automobile. Her lover, the district attorney, prosecutes her to the full extent of the law and sends her to prison.

MODERN AND BEACON—Laughter and romance run hand in hand in the double photoplay bill presented at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week, where Owen Moore is seen in "Love Is An Awful Thing" and Dustin Farnum is starred in "The Yosemite Trail." As its name indicates, the story of "The Yosemite Trail" occurs in the Yosemite Valley. It is well chosen as the scene of conflict between men who struggle for the things of existence in a country where passions run primitive and lawless. Dustin Farnum is seen in the virile type of character which he makes so much of and leaves nothing to be desired in his portrayal.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA — A truly great star has come to the screen in Guy Bates Post, the distinguished actor, who opened last night at Gordon's Olympia Theatre in the film version of "The Masquerader," a Richard Walton Tully production distributed through First National.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA — The whole family will enjoy Jackie Coogan's latest picture, "Trouble," showing at Gordon's Scollay Sq. Olympia this week. Jackie is seen as a little orphan who is adopted by the gentle wife of a brutal plumber who will not work, so Jackie takes his place. In the end the plumber is sent to jail for wife beating and Jackie and his adopted mother find happiness in the country.

GORDON'S STRAND AND GORDON'S CENTRAL—Norma Talmadge, in "The Eternal Flame," began an engagement at Gordon's Strand and Gordon's Central Sq. Theatre yesterday. Adopted from Honore Balzac's "La Duchesse de Langeais," with all the color and pomp and glory of the Second Restoration period in the Court of Louis XVIII, it is an epic of the screen, and Norma is superb. Infuried by the act of her husband, the Duc de Langeais, she becomes the heartless coquette of the court.

GAYETY THEATRE—Would you like to see a pippin of a musical burlesque show? Then see "Giglos," the brand new production at the Gayety Theatre this week. Joseph Leavitt has assembled a cast of talented principals and a chorus of twenty-five of the snappiest, prettiest chorus girls that ever adorned a burlesque stage in Boston. The company puts on a merry melange of jazz music, song and dance, which they call "Joytime," and it is well named.

WALDRON'S CASINO—Patrons of Waldron's Casino saw yesterday the biggest burlesque attraction in many ways that has ever visited this city. It is Joe Hurtig's Bowery burlesquers, presenting an elaborate musical extravaganza, entitled "Here, There and Everywhere."

State Ballroom

Baron Arcenlan, creator of the Parisian tango and acclaimed as the king of ballroom dancers, with his partner, Miss Frances Aldrich, both of whom appeared earlier in the season at Keith's Theatre, have been especially engaged by the management of the new and beautiful State Ballroom for a series of exhibition dances, the first of which takes place next Monday evening, October 9.

Rich in Royalties

AVERY HOPWOOD.

This playwright, it is said, leads all authors for gross receipts on plays he has written.

Coming Events

PLYMOUTH THEATRE — There is probably no actor in America more in demand than Lowell Sherman, who will play his original role in "Lawful Larceny," when that distinguished Broadway success begins its engagement at the Plymouth Theatre next Monday evening, under the direction of A. H. Woods.

ORPHEUM THEATRE — "Forget Me Not," a fine, clean, beautiful picture produced by Metro, is the big attraction at Loew's Orpheum Theatre the week of October 9. It portrays the life of two foundlings who find in their devotion for one another some compensation for the unkind fate which has deprived them of home and the affection of parents. The orphans are played by Bessie Love and Gareth Hughes, who make the characters so lovable and so pitiful that there is a constant tug at the heartstrings.

DANCING ACT TOPS BILL AT KEITH'S

Mlle. Germaine Mitty and Eugene Tillio, in a terpsichorean drama, "La Danse Jalouse," top the bill at Keith's this week. The act is a little different from the ordinary esthetic dancing act in that the theme of the drama is carried clear through the entire performance, permitting the audience to follow the thread clearly to the end. It is a finished act and met well merited applause.

The surrounding bill was well greeted by an audience that appeared willing to be entertained. Eva Shirley and Oscar Adler's jazz orchestra stopped the show early in the bill, but it was chiefly because of the orchestra. "Pee-Wee" Myers and "Ford" Hanford, the latter being the originator of pounding music from a saw, also went well.

Other acts were: Sherwin Kelly in "Bike-ology." Josef Diskay, Hungarian tenor; the Briants in "The Dream of the Moving Man"; Harry Norwood and Alpha Hall in "It May Have Happened to You"; Blanche and Jimmie Creighton, and Rasso, a juggler.

REVUE AT THE COLONIAL IS DAZZLING

By FRED J. McISAAC.
Dramatic Editor.

The "Music Box Revue," exactly as it was given during a record breaking year at the new Music Box Theatre in New York, was presented at the Colonial Theatre last night.

Irving Berlin wrote the music of the show and some of the words. Clever skits were contributed by William Collier and Frances Nordstrom, George V. Hobart and Thomas J. Gray. Many minds were busy in building what is one of the most impressive revues ever turned out in this country.

Wille Collier, aided and abetted by Sally Ward, furnish most of the comedy. Originally Collier had Sam Bernard as a sparring partner, but Bernard left the cast months ago because of illness, and Mr. Ward gives a fairly creditable imitation of him.

One of the most amusing sketches I have ever seen was "Nothing But Cuts," in which Collier, as a stage manager at a rehearsal, kept cutting the dialogue of a play until it became simply a pantomime. And the sketch in which Florence Moore burlesqued her Al Woods's bedroom farce career, and concealed three men at once under her bed, was rough but uproariously funny. Miss Moore later has a specialty which isn't very good because she talks about herself too much. She is the funniest woman on the stage when she has something to be funny about.

Ivy Sawyer and Joseph Santley have important singing and dancing roles and acquit themselves delightfully. Ethelind Terry, a girl with a dazzling Iberian personality and a really beautiful lyric soprano, more than makes up for the absence of Wilda Bennett from the cast. Renie Riano gets a lot of laughs in the janitor apartment house scene. The girls are beautiful and capaisoned most magnanimously, as Solly Ward might say.

"THREE WISE FOOLS" AT THE ST. JAMES

"Three Wise Fools" is the offering of the Boston Stock Company at the St. James Theatre this week.

The story centres around three men who have failed in love and have made a solemn pledge to band together until death parted them. They take for their slogan, "One for all and all for one." By a strange coincidence, they were all in love with the same girl. She parted from their company and none of them had seen or heard from her for twenty-three years, when, suddenly, Judge Trumbull receives a letter from their former sweetheart. In the letter he receives a strange will which leaves the three men her child, Sydney.

Eveta Nudsen as Sydney is at her best in this production. Edward Darney and Walter Gilbert also have important roles.

Plays That Remain

WILBUR THEATRE—"The Bat" continues its amazing success in Boston at the Wilbur Theatre.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—The last week of Thurston was ushered in auspiciously last evening at the Plymouth.

SHUBERT THEARTE—"Tangerine," the amazing vehicle for Julia Sanderson, continues to draw large audiences to the Shubert.

TREMONT THEATRE—There is no cessation in the demands of the Boston public to see George M. Cohan's comedians in "Little Nellie Kelly," which began the tenth week of its treinendously successful engagement at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—Last night inaugurated the second week of the engagement of Francine Larrimore in "Nice People," Rachel Crothers' new society play at the Hollis Street Theatre. In "Nice People" will be found a searching analysis of the habits and customs of the present day generation of young people.

SELWYN THEATRE.—"Shuffle Along," the all-colored musical comedy, entered its tenth week of record-breaking capacity business last night at the Selwyn Theatre. Because it contains the many musical comedy elements which command the popular fancy this rollicking entertainment continues to draw crowded houses.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS—Of the long list of individual achievements won by various members of the popular Somerville Players, the work of Joseph Granby as Lord Beaconsfield in "Disraeli," will unquestionably stand out as the most conspicuous individual triumph in the long and commendable history of this organization. Mr. Granby's work at both performances yesterday stamped him as an actor of keen knowledge and wide experience. His masterly handling of this difficult role won him the plaudits of two capacity audiences.

BIG 'NERO' FILM SHOWN AT THE PARK

With one of the mightiest dramas recorded in history, that tremendous surge of events preceding the dissolution of the great Roman empire, the producers of "Nero" had every inspiration in the making of the photoplay which was shown for the first times in Boston at the Park Theatre yesterday.

William Fox produced the photoplay, which was pictured in Rome with native players, except Violet Mersehau, who is seen in the leading feminine role.

The famed event of the burning of the Eternal City provided a fire scene of mammoth proportions and of thrilling picturing. But this is only one of the many scenes of magnitude, the climax dealing with the uprising of the Romans which ended in the death of Nero by his own hand. In the flow of events the story of the Christian girl and her beloved, a Roman hero, never loses its sequence and development.

HOUDINI SEEN IN PERSON AT GLOBE

Houdini, the world's renowned wizard and mystifier, appeared in person at the Globe Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. This remarkable genius, who for years has defied the world to keep him locked up, performed several of his entertaining feats and gave an excellent disclosure on the subject of spiritualism.

The story of "The Man From Beyond" concerns the finding of a man encased for more than a hundred years in a mass of Arctic ice, and upon being hewn from the same, is brought back to life to live a haunting romance, the climax of which is the most thrilling scene ever depicted on the screen—the rescue of a girl on the very brink of Niagara Falls, in which Houdini, after being whirled through the surging rapids, saves the girl at the very moment the canoe, in which she is helpless, is about to plunge into the gorge, hundreds of feet below.

"TOWN TALK" SCORES HIT AT MAJESTIC

Barney Gerard's "Town Talk," starring Johnny Dooley, the internationally-known comedian, was well received by two large audiences at the Majestic Theatre yesterday.

It is Dooley's first appearance in a production which savors so strongly of burlesque, but he proved that he is as popular in a show of this type as in any other.

In the vaudeville acts which polish off the main show, Ethel Gray, the beautiful model, appears in a comedy stunt that is a hummer. The big finish comes when James B. Carson and company present "The Music Publishers," with "Rube" Nelson, Eddie Green, Gertrude Hayes, Riano, Northlane and Hayes furnishing the excitement. The roller skating and dancing exhibition of Bacon and Fontaine is also a treat worth seeing.

FRIENDS PREDICT LAWSON WILL STAGE QUICK "COME BACK"

Will Tom Lawson, the picturesque stock market manipulator, stage a "comeback" with the money he derives from the sale of "Dreamwold," his lovely country estate at Scituate?

His friends in Boston stock brokerage houses believe the author of "Frenzied Finance" and "Friday, the Thirteenth," will come back with a bang before he is many weeks older. They expect that he will recoup his fortunes by a big boom in copper stocks.

It was as a manipulator of Bay State Gas, Trinity and other stocks that Lawson made his big "killings," and those on the inside believe Lawson's recent move in placing all his real estate and personal property in the hands of trustees for sale is the first step of the financial wizard to get back on his feet again.

WILL HAVE FORTUNE LEF.

"It is true" said a leading Boston broker, who has known Lawson intimately for many years, "that Lawson lost heavily in the New York market in the big break following the World War armistice. He did not lose in the failure of Haskell & Co., the Boston Stock Exchange house, as many have stated.

"Lawson has been financially embarrassed for some time because of his losses, but I know he is alert mentally, despite rumors to the contrary, and I look for a big comeback on his part.

"Dreamwold was a heavy drain on his finances, but now that he has turned it over to two trustees to dispose of as they see fit for payment of his debts of $225,000, I believe you will soon learn that it is the first step in a plan of his to recoup his lost fortune.

"After all his property is sold and his debts paid, I believe he will have about $250,000 to $300,000 left. I believe he will then take hold of some listed stock such as Trinity and boom it. Then the comeback will take place.

MAY REVIVE TRINITY.

"It was as a manipulator that Lawson made his money and I feel that he is still capable of doing what he has done in the past. Trinity is selling at a very low price now, only $1.25 a share. It has sold for as high as $42.88. There was some talk recently about the company taking over some coal mines. I think the time is ripe for a rise in this stock. I made money out of it at the time Lawson did. My judgment was the same as his was. He can't touch the curb stocks because of the 'blue-sky' law, but it wouldn't surprise me a bit if he booms Trinity and makes his pile.

"His $50,000 annuity, for which he paid a million dollars, can't be touched. He will have that anyway. That will be enough to live on.

William A. Burton, Lawson's confidential secretary and one of the trustees to whom the stock plunger made over all his property, valued at $600,000, told a Boston American reporter this move does not mean that Lawson will not enter the stock market again.

COLLEGE MAY BUY ESTATE.

Mr. Burton emphatically denied that Lawson is incapacitated, either mentally or physically. "I have talked with him within a day or two," said Mr. Burton, "and he is all right both mentally and physically, despite stories to the contrary which have been going the rounds."

It is understood that officials of a college are interested in purchasing "Dreamwold," for which Lawson paid $2,500,000. If the property is bought for college purposes the magnificent show stables, cow barns and riding academy will probably be turned into dormitories.

One of the last acts the trustees will perform will be to remove the tomb in which the body of Lawson's wife rests. It is located in the midst of a wild flower garden near "The Nest," a cottage where the financial wizard and his wife spent many hours together.

"I had a severe breaking out on my face. It first started with a red blotch which after a while festered over and formed eruptions. The eruptions itched and burned and I lost considerable sleep at night because of the irritation. My face was disfigured for the time being.

"The trouble lasted about a year. I used other remedies but without success. A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a free sample which helped me. I purchased more and was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Leon Abel, R. F. D. 4, Colchester, Conn.

HARDING MEN WANT LEGION TO HIT BONUS

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 3.—A drive by administration supporters to kill the so-called soldiers' bonus issue by the election of a new national commander opposed to "adjusted compensation" for ex-service men was well under way today.

Hanford MacNider, the present national commander, and his aides in the fight for the bonus at the recent session of Congress declared that the issue would unquestionably be "fought all over again" at the New Orleans gathering of veterans.

Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian and a World War veteran, who was renamed recently as Delaware's representative on the Legion's national committee, is expected to figure conspicuously at New Orleans among those urging that the position of President Harding in vetoing the bonus bill be sustained by the convention.

Addressing the convention of the Delaware department Miller declared the bonus bill had "resulted in placing the ex-service men of the country in a false light before a great number of their fellow-citizens for whom they fought."

The anti-bonus forces in the New Orleans convention are depending for a great addition to their ranks from the delegates from the Southern States.

PART OF ESTATE COURT GIVES TO ILLEGITIMATE

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 3.—Victor E. Lembeck, twenty-seven, of Jersey City, illegitimate son of the late Victor H. Lembeck, can share the estate of his grandfather, Henry Lembeck, Jersey City brewer, who died in 1904, The Supreme Court upheld the Hudson Circuit Court's verdict sustaining the grandson's right to inherit under his grandfather's will.

Existence of the illegitimate grandson, said the Supreme Court, was known to the grandfather when he made the will, and there is a highly probable inference that he intended to include the grandson.

The grandfather left real estate and $8,000 in trust for his son, Victor H. Lembeck, for life and at his death "to his child or children, if any, now living."

CHARGES HUSBAND DREW KNIFE ACROSS HER NECK

"Whittling Bill" Betrays Rum Runners

CHARGE BRIBERY BY U. S.

"Dry" Officials Get Tips From Canadians on Liquor Shipments

Boston men, frankly bootleggers on a big scale, or rather rum-runners from Canada into the United States, declared to the American today that Federal prohibition forces had sent agents into Canada to check out ships carrying liquors, simply to forestall a charge of an international aspect which the rum runners had threatened to bring against the prohibition officials.

The charge in brief was that the American prohibition authorities were paying fees to Canadian customs officials for information regarding rum shipments out of Canada.

The charge is based on the Canadian "Whittling Bill."

The process of liquor shipments from Canada, according to one of the rum-runners, one of whose ships has already been seized with a cargo worth more than $22,000, is as follows:

In shipping a case lot it is necessary for the shipper to take the liquor out of a Canadian customs warehouse.

THE "WHITTLING BILL."

He must make out "the Whittling Bill," which declares how much liquor he takes out, how much he pays for it, whether it is for medicinal or beverage purposes and the alcoholic content of the cargo.

This completed the rum-runner goes to the United States consul at the Canadian port of shipment to take out his clearance papers. But, since rum is contraband, there is no mention of it on the manifest he signs. Accordingly there is nothing said to the consul about rum, and the man receives his clearance papers legally.

WATCH SET ON SHIPS.

But, declare the rum-runners, the Canadian customs officials then go to the American customs authorities and for a fee submit the "Whittling Bill," whereupon a watch is immediately set for the craft in question.

While no official statement has been made by the prohibition authorities it is known that two Boston agents at least have been sent to Canadian ports to watch the loading of ships with liquor and communicate descriptions of the craft to the patrols in American waters

BULL PUTS KIBOSH ON MOTOR TRIP

Westfield, Oct. 3.—George W Leary of Highland avenue, a postal clerk, and a friend "flivvered" along the outskirts, as George expatiated on the durability of his car. A bull, aroused from a peaceful nap by the rumble of the motor, glared fiercely, then charged. There was a terrific impact. The bull retreated for another charge. George fled.

Giving Her Mate to Rival

MRS. CAROLINE GLEASON

DIVORCE SO HUBBY MAY WED

Dedham Woman Sticks to Promise to Give Up Mate to Other Woman

True to the promise that she would set her husband free so that he might wed "the other woman," Mrs. Caroline D. L. Gleason of Dedham today filed suit for divorce from Herbert E. Gleason. The suit was filed at the Dedham Superior Court. She charges desertion and neglect to provide. She asks the custody of one child.

Mrs. Gleason recently attracted wide attention by her sensational statement that she would free her husband so that he might go to the "other woman," who had borne him five children. The husband was found in Worcester with the other woman, after a hunt lasting seven years. Unknown to his wife, during that period, he was living in Worcester with Victoria Boucher and they were known as man and wife.

A total of twenty-two divorce libels were filed at the same court today. Among the others filed are the following: Ida May Williams of Brockton seeks divorce from Monroe Williams of Holbrook. She charges desertion. They were married November 21, 1892; Richard F. Wood sues Hazel P. Wood of Pomona, N. Y., alleging desertion on November 27, 1917. They were married June 5, 1914; Levina O. Papineau of Bellingham alleges that Alfred J. Papineau deserted her on September 29, 1918. they were married March 28, 1910; she asks custody of two children, Edward Lawrence of Brookline alleges that Mary Whitney Lawrence of Brookline deserted him on April 9, 1919, they were married October 5, 1912.

Harold J. Patterson of Brookline seeks annulment of his marriage to Agnes Dorothy Kirston of Los Angeles. He claims that they were married in Toronto, May 26, 1913; since that time, he alleges, he has learned that she was already married.

SIGNS LEAD TO SUIT FOR $50,000

William C. Batchelder and his wife, Mrs. Edna D. Batchelder, of Quincy, filed suit for $50,000 each against Eugene H Sprague of Quincy in the Dedham Superior Court today.

Several signs, alleged to have been placed in a lot of land adjacent to the Batchelder Summer home in Onset during the Summer are the causes of the suit. These signs bore writings of a "malicious" nature, it is claimed. One sign, in particular read "This land for sale, together with $425 bill for groceries sold Mr. and Mrs. W. Clenton Batchelder of Wollaston and Quincy. Signed, E. H. Sprague."

George Kasock of Brookline filed suit for $6,000 against the M. F. Foley Company of Boston, from whom, he alleges, he bought unwholesome lobster.

SONS CONTEST WILL OF E. P. KENNARD

The will of the late Edward P. Kennard, formerly of Boston, who died last year and left most of his large estate to Fannie E. Hanson, his housekeeper, and Frederick H. Kennard of Newton, is being contested in the Supreme Court at Dover, N. H., by his four sons, Reginald, Waldo, Wilhelm and Victor. The latter was a famous Harvard football star.

Reginald Percy Kennard.

The sons complain that Frederick Kennard and the housekeeper exercised undue influence over their father, and allege he was of unsound mind. His widow, Mrs. E. P. Kennard, testified that he had an insane fear of being poisoned, and compelled her to taste of everything she set before him. She added that he insisted on having all the pictures hung with their faces to the wall, and made groundless charges of infidelity on her part.

LOVE BALM SUIT FOR $20,000 FILED

Carmela Bertolina of Somerville says Italo Davoli of Medford was a perfect lover, but he isn't of the marrying kind at least so far as she is concerned.

She filed suit today for $20,000 heart balm, alleging that Italo captured her affections shortly after she came to this country in March 1920, and that he promised to wed. The suit was filed in Middlesex Superior Court, East Cambridge.

DOGS DOOMED TO WANDER

A dog's life—at least for Mrs. Margaret Wiseman's dogs—is one move after another.

Mrs. Wiseman, now living at No. 41 Walnut street, Dorchester, had seven dogs in Revere. Neighbors kicked about the barking and disposition of the seven. So the canine septette was moved to a stable at No. 358 Portland street, East Cambridge.

Ere long this neighborhood complained. Patrolman Thomas Stokes entered complaint for the kickers. Mrs. Wiseman was ordered to Cambridge court on a charge of keeping the barkers in the stable. The case was continued from time to time.

Today the complaint was dismissed when Patrolman Stokes informed Judge Stone that the dogs had been moved again.

AUTO STRIKES GIRL PICKING UP PENNY

Struck by an automobile as she bent to pick up a penny in Arlington square, twelve-year-old Florence Cohen was removed to the City Hospital suffering from contusions and abrasions to many parts of the body. The automobile was driven by W. D. Stanton of No. 37 Brainbridge street.

DESERTED WIFE FIGHTS SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Frank Amato, twelve years old, of Brooklyn, N. Y., sat in the Suffolk County Superior Court and gazed at a fine looking man, who was testifying against Frank's mother, Mrs. Sara Amato, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in a divorce suit.

"Who is that man?" asked the boy.

"That is your father," replied the sad-faced mother.

It was the first time that young Frank had seen his father since he was just a year old.

Pietro Amato, formerly proprietor of a barber shop on Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, charges his wife with desertion. The time of the desertion as fixed by Amato in his action is July 10, 1913.

In court it was brought out by court records brought on from Brooklyn that Amato had been brought into court in Brooklyn on July 9, 1913, on a complaint of abandonment of his wife and child and had been ordered by the court to pay his wife the sum of $8 a week for the support of herself and child.

HUB MAN MAY BE CUSTOMS JUDGE

Thomas O. Marvin of this city is mentioned as successor to Marion De Vries of California, presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, according to advices from Washington. Mr. Marvin, former secretary of the Home Market Club, is now chairman of the United States Tariff Commission. Senator Macumber of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who piloted the Macumber-Fordney tariff bill through the Senate, is reported as being slated to succeed Mr. Marvin on the tariff commission.

TAKE WIFE OF ENSIGN IN RAID

Found Her With Another Man After Getting Money He Sent Her From Chinese Port

Navy officials recently received a request from Ensign John Kaiss, chief gunner, U. S. N. at present stationed in a Chinese port, to locate his wife, Mrs. Cora Kaiss.

For some months, at the request of his wife, Kaiss has been having the $100 monthly government allowance allotted to his wife in care of the Back Bay police station. Each month the allotment was called for by Mrs. Kaiss and cashed, but the ensign got no word from his wife.

Mrs. John Kaiss.

An allotment came due this week, and today Mrs. Kaiss, accompanied by a man, got the check and left. They were followed by Sergeant French and Patrolman Devine of Station 16 to an apartment at No. 60 Batavia street, Back Bay.

An hour later the police broke into the apartment, and found Mrs. Kaiss and the youth who had accompanied her to the station. They were arrested. The man said he was Harry A. White of Columbus avenue, married and father of a four-year-old boy.

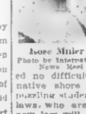

They were arraigned in Roxbury Court, pleaded guilty and held in bail of $500 each for a hearing next week.

Once before, ten years ago, before her marriage to Kaiss, the woman figured in the prints. Then, as Cora Olson, she was involved in a shooting, in which she was the target. In a fit of jealous rage Charles Lowery of South Acton, a seaman, forced his way into her home and fired five shots at her. Three of them took effect. For a long time the girl was in the Massachusetts General Hospital in a dangerous condition, but eventually she recovered.

Lowery received a sentence of from five to seven years in State's prison for the shooting.

MAINE GIRL BARRED AFTER PANAMA TRIP

New York, Oct. 3.—Although she has been a resident of Lewiston, Me., since she was three years of age, Rose Miller, a beautiful dancer returning from Colon, Panama, has been denied entrance to the United States under the immigration law.

Miss Miller was returning from an engagement to the Canal Zone and expected no difficulty in landing on her native shore again. The case is puzzling students of the immigration laws, who are wondering how the new law will work next.

SLIVER OF GLASS PIERCES BOY'S HEART

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3.—James Thomas, fourteen, a high school student, trying to prevent a door from slamming, thrust his hand through the glass panel and a sliver of glass pierced his heart. He walked down the steps of the building. Then he collapsed, and death came quickly.

Kicked Out of Bed She Charges

MRS. MARY A. CALNAN.

SAYS HE HURLED SPINACH AT HER

Mrs. Calnan's Daughter Backs Mother's Accusations in Divorce Suit

How her husband pushed her out of the house, threw spinach at her and drew the back of a carving knife across her neck, were told to Judge Fox in Suffolk Divorce Court today, by pretty Mrs. Mary A. Calnan, who is suing Jeremiah F. Calnan for divorce. She also declared he kicked her out of bed.

Mrs. Calnan told a story of suffering at the hands of her husband which had its culmination on June 18, 1921, when he ordered her from the house, at No. 9 Holman street, Allston, slammed the door in her face and said, "Don't return."

The wife said that family troubles grew out of quarrels over money. She denied with emphasis, that she had been "going out with other men" in response to cross-examination.

HURLED HOT COFFEE.

"On one occasion my husband threatened me with a carving knife," she testified. "He drew the back of it across my neck and body. Another time, at breakfast, he threw hot coffee at me. Again, at the table he picked up a handful of spinach and hurled it at me."

Asked if her husband did not wash the clothes when he returned from work in the evenings, Mrs. Calnan said that he only washed them when she was ill. She denied that she had turned on the gas in his bedroom on one occasion. She admitted that she smelled gas and that he was in a semi-stupor. She called a doctor, she said, and he was revived.

A daughter, Ruth Calnan, aged fourteen, took the stand in her mother's defence and said, "I remember when my father pushed my mother out of the door, slammed it in her face and told her not to come back. I saw him throw spinach at her at the table one day.

ACCUSED BY DAUGHTER.

"Another time I found my mother sitting on the floor crying. She told me that my father had pushed her out of bed. When I interfered, he threw me on the bed and cut my hat [illegible] fingernails.

[illegible] was cruel to my sister Grace and me when mother was around. Since they have been separated he has acted differently toward us and he is kind to us."

Mrs. Calnan works for a Boston newspaper. Asked if it were true that she worked under another name, Mrs. Calnan admitted that she did. She said, however, that most of her work was by telephone and that she used a name that would be more easily remembered than her own.

HUSBAND "PLAYFUL."

Calnan himself claims to be a playful sort of a chap. That is what he told the court when called to the stand.

"I was always playful around the house," he said.

"Were you playful when you threw spinach at your wife," he was asked.

"Yes, I was [illegible] putting some spinach into my mouth [illegible] said something to her [illegible] the spinach at her but [illegible]"

Calnan admitted [illegible] his younger [illegible] several times and that when [illegible] fered "I turned [illegible]"

"Were you [illegible] mood?" asked [illegible]

"Well [illegible]" he replied [illegible] feel [illegible] play [illegible] tapped [illegible]

He admitted he put his wife out of the house on two occasions, but "only took her by the arm and led her to the door; no great force was used.

GIRLS SMOKED, AND IT COST JUST $50

Mrs. Elsie Henrickson wanted to smoke. So did her sister, Mrs. Ruth Hickey.

They didn't dare smoke on the streets, so they went into a Tremont street tailor shop, South End.

Said they, in chorus, "Where's the smoking room?"

Answered the proprietor, "Ain't any."

They smoked anyway.

He attempted to telephone the police. They took away the receiver, breaking [illegible]

Patrolman [illegible] happened in.

The sisters turned and attacked him.

Two more police, Special Officers Dessessa and O'Neil, came to the rescue.

In Municipal Court all three showed evidence of combat, Dessessa exhibiting a badly scratched face.

Said Judge Murray, "Mrs. Elsie Henrickson, I fine $20 for assault and battery and $15 for profane language, and you, Ruth Hickey, I fine $15 for profane language."

"Your honor," spoke the sisters, "those officers treated us awfully rough. You would never have thought we were women."

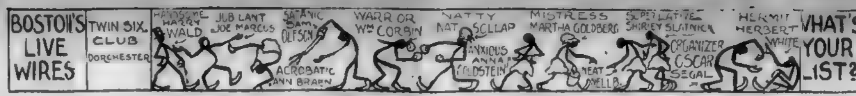

"Let us be fair about this matter of equality," returned the court. "A police officer has just as much right to lay hands on a woman as on a man."

The sisters live [illegible] street, Somerville.

SOLDIER LOSES LOAD OF FURNITURE

One truck load of furniture, valued at $800, is missing, and thus far police of eastern Massachusetts have been unable to locate any trace of it. First Sergeant Frederick Simonson and Corporal McTaggart of Company [illegible] engaged a [illegible] to move their household effects from Camp Devens to Boston. Private Ahearn was assigned to guard the driver. He did as far as Arlington, where the truckman said he would have to stop for the night. Ahearn came on to Boston. That was the last seen of the furniture.

JOHNNY WILSON AND GREB TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK RING

CHAMPION ALSO AFTER BOUT WITH SIKI

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Wilson, world's middleweight champion, despite all ridiculous rulings of the New York Boxing Commission, is going to battle Harry Greb in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York. The tussle will be fought at catchweights.

Johnny Wilson

This is a victory for Marty Killilea, manager of Wilson. Killilea refused to be clubbed into a Wilson-Greb match by Tex Rickard. The latter wanted the contest at 160 pounds at 2 o'clock, which would have given Greb a chance to win the championship.

Greb was billed to quarrel with Bob Martin at Madison Square Garden Friday night. Chairman William Muldoon of the New York Commission instructed Matchmaker Flourney that Greb and Wilson must meet before either of these men could battle in New York. The Wilson-Greb tussle was then virtually closed. It will probably be staged the latter part of this month or early in November.

Killilea has also let it be known that Wilson is willing to enter a ring with Battling Siki. Marty, it will be remembered, made an effort to match the Charlestown warrior with Carpentier when the latter first came to this country. He will now attempt to induce Siki to enter a ring with Wilson.

The average boxing fan does not get enthusiastic about a boxing exhibition. This is due to the fact most star ring men insist upon a rack set-to when they show in an exhibition. Jack Dempsey, who shows for the Parent Club at Mechanics Building Saturday night, has made an agreeable departure from the old way of things. He has agreed to battle four rounds with Jack Thompson, giant negro heavyweight. Thompson has quarreled with Harry Wills ten or eleven times and was always able to make things [illegible] interesting for the colored heavyweight champion.

Thompson is bigger physically than Dempsey. He has also had a world of experience during his battles in the big places and tank towns.

Thompson claims he is entitled to first shot at Dempsey instead of Wills. He will try to show why he would be able to make things interesting for "Tiger Jack" when he opposes America's wonder man Saturday night.

The semi-final of ten rounds, which will bring together George Robinson and Jack McClellan, should also be crowded with thrills. It will be Robinson's first bout since his impressive victory over [illegible] [illegible] McClellan [illegible] [illegible] Billy Shade and should go to the post a fine conditon.

The frolic between Willie Grad[well] and Young T[illegible] should be a torrid affair, as should also be the case when Freddy Madden and Frankie Ryan meet.

Dempsey Will Arrive in Boston Friday

Dempsey will arrive in our midst Friday so that he will be rested for his exhibition on the following evening. The champion is working out daily at Stillman's gym in New York. He does not intend to be caught napping if the opportunity for a real bout should pop up.

There will be three eight-round preliminaries at the Armory A. A. show on October 10. Ernie Sawyer of the North End and Frank Merra of South Boston, rivals as amateurs, will mingle in the semi-final. Billy Murphy of Lowell and Johnny Lucas of Worcester will clash, as will Henry Ford and Al [illegible] of the North End. The feature of course will be between Jack Malone and Johnny Karr.

Capacity Crowd Will See Shevlin and Shade

The Shevlin-Shade bout, which will be staged by the Arena A. C. at the Boston Arena next Monday night, is one of those natural matches which make things easy for the promoters. The fans have been waiting for this tussle for months. As a result, the announcement that the men would battle next Monday night was [illegible] [illegible] for reservations [illegible] expected [illegible] large a crowd [illegible] which saw Malone and Wa[illegible] [illegible] will be on hand when the [illegible] for the [illegible].

This is the hardest bout we have had to dope in months. As far as betting is concerned it looks like an even thing to the speculative element.

One man can give you ten reasons why Shade will win. Another will give you ten reasons why Shevlin will take the decision.

TURK GRAPPLER IS CONFIDENT OF WIN

At the Grand Opera House Thursday night what promises to be a big affair in the local wrestling world will be the tussle between Ahmed Noory, the champion wrestler of Kemal Pasha's nationalist army, against George Kotsonaros, the Greek [illegible] [illegible] who has [illegible] and defeated all [illegible] since his arrival in Boston. The Turk [illegible] [illegible] he will [illegible] the Greek [illegible] jiffy and hundreds of his countrymen will be on hand to see him show his goods. The Turk will go after Stanislaus Zbyszko if he wins.

Stanislaus Zbyszko

This main bout will be the best two falls in three to a finish.

The other grapplers on the bill line up as follows: To[illegible] [illegible], welterweight champion of New England, against Alex Sundstrom, the Swedish welterweight. Louie Andrews, the Greek lightweight, will meet Frankie Santi, the Vermont strong boy. Tickets may be secured at the Howard or at the Grand Opera House the day of the bout.

REED KAYOS WOLGAST IN FIFTH AT LYNN

Pal Reed of Framingham knocked out Johnny Wolgast in five rounds in the main bout at the Casino A. C., Lynn. Reed could have finished his man in the first round but he let him stay to give the crowd a run for its money.

Two other bouts also ended in knockouts. Fred Clark of Salem sent Tibby Lowery of Malden to sleep in the first round and [illegible] Madonna from Rhode Island put over the soporific on Young Neddo of Cambridge in the third round.

The only bout that went its full distance was that between Harry Noyes of the North End and Whitey Walsh of New York. They boxed six rounds. Noyes won.

PARKER VS HAMLIN IN SALEM RING

Charley Parker, South End kayo king who has won his last four [illegible] will make [illegible] effort to continue his victory [illegible] when he [illegible] Louie Hamlin of [illegible], N. H., [illegible] the Naumkeag A. A. of Salem, [illegible] night. [illegible] skills [illegible] [illegible] tough [illegible] Parker is in for a [illegible] evening.

Matchmaker Joe Hayes apparently [illegible] what they want [illegible].

MALLINSON BEATS BILL CARNEY AGAIN

New Bedford, Oct. 3.—Tom Mallinson, an English welterweight, handed Billy Carney, the local puncher, a decisive licking in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C.

It was Mallinson's second victory over Carney and his third bout in this country. He beat the local boy to the punch in every round, working a stiff left jab to the face and a hard crashing [illegible] to the body with telling effect.

In the fifth round [illegible] [illegible] with a left to the [illegible] right to the chin.

TUFTS HURT BY VAN FRENCH INJURY

Tufts' prospects for a big year received a setback when an X-ray discovered a broken bone in Van French's foot. Coach Eddie Casey must now look for another punter.

Art Terrill and Frank Roach are consistently fair performers but [illegible] in class with French. The punting Saturday after French left the game was the one unsatisfactory [illegible] of Tufts play. It was the down the field work of Machia and Clandonet which kept Tufts from being put on the defensive. With the exception of French all the players came through without injury.

Coach Casey gave the players a long talk on the weaknesses disclosed in the game with Connecticut Aggies. The eleven as a whole showed better football than has been seen at the Oval in recent years. The line charged low and the backs showed great individual ability, but good interference was lacking.

Before such teams as Williams and Bowdoin can be defeated there must be a big improvement on the part of those [illegible] the runner, this being especially true of the ends and backs.

WILLIE CORBETT REGULAR STUDENT

Willie Corbett, the Harvard College boxer, who also possesses a diploma of civil engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has recently made a change in his original plan of study. Last year, on his entrance in Harvard College, he contemplated taking a two years' business course, but on finishing the first half, he has now entered on a three-year law course. Willie is a remarkable boy and deserves a lot of credit, as he has worked his way through school on his ring earnings.

New York, Oct. 3.—Another world record will be broken in the coming world's series, for Bill Klem, long regarded as the best umpire in the world, will again officiate in the diamond classic. McCormick will be the other National League arbiter and Clarence "Brick" Owens, who was in the National League eleven years ago, and George Hildebrand, will be the American League officials.

WESLEYAN'S COACH PLEASED WITH WORK

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 3.—The Wesleyan Varsity came through the game with Union in good shape, and Coach Fred Martin was well pleased with the showing. The back field has the appearance of being fast and aggressive. An effort will be made this week to strengthen the line especially at guards. The Union backs were able to find holes as the game progressed.

EAGLE PLAYERS PREPARE FOR OPENING

After a two-day layoff, the Boston College squad reported for practice in fine condition, all the injured men appearing in uniform. Coach Cavanaugh will spend the rest of the week in polishing up the team for a first contest with Boston University, which will be staged at Braves Field on Saturday.

Lome Laberry was able to do a [illegible] work yesterday and his shoulder is expected to be well enough by the end of the week to allow him to participate in the B. U. game.

With the backfield in perfect working order, Coach Cavanaugh will devote most of the practice to strengthening the line. B. C. has a fast backfield on which Coach Whelan [illegible] to smash the Eagle defense. With Heaphy, Bill Doyle, Keahane, Paton, Comerford and McManus, all veterans in the line, the Back Bay eleven will find itself a defensive wall that will not easily give way.

Secret practice will be held for the rest of the week, and the Maroon and Gold squad will be put through a few more scrimmages to perfect new plays and put on the finishing touches for Saturday's contest.

HOLY CROSS IS NOT A TEAM OF VETERANS

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Cleo O'Donnell wishes it distinctly understood that young men are graduated from Holy Cross.

They enter Holy Cross as freshmen; continue a second year as sophomores, a third year as juniors and a fourth year as seniors, whereupon, having satisfied the professors they have learned their lessons, they are issued diplomas and shunted off into the cold, crool world!

Cleo sketches their course in such detail because he has become sick and tired of reading about the "veteran" Holy Cross football team he is bringing to Cambridge this week, when, as a matter of frigid fact five of his first stringers and double that number of second stringers of last Fall have completed their four years work at Holy Cross and no longer linger at that institution.

The first stringers to depart are Gildea, captain and centre; Wallingford, quarterback; Gagnon, triple-threat halfback; Cas[illegible], 2[illegible] pound guard, and Niland, an efficient tackle.

The loss of the first two named is a particularly telling one. Gildea started all the Holy Cross plays last year, and Wallingford directed them. Remove the starter and steering gear from your flivver and let's see you get anywhere.

Of course new parts are being introduced to the Holy Cross machine. But unlike flivver parts they do not come ready made. They must be molded and fitted with rare care, and much depends upon the material from which they are fashioned.

New Faces in the Holy Cross Lineup

What the quality of the Holy Cross material with which Coach O'Donnell is working remains to be revealed to local football fandom. The Purple's coach has switched Simendinger, a halfback, into the quarterback berth. He is employing Broussard and Crowley, substitutes last year, in the halfback positions, formerly filled by Gagnon and Simendinger; he is employing Bur[illegible] [illegible] as centre while in the tackle and guard positions vacated by Niland and Cas[illegible] [illegible] two [illegible] subs of last season [illegible].

Against the somewhat uncertain opposition furnished previously by the Naval Base team and Providence College these new men in old positions and [illegible] new positions, performed reasonably well, but when they face Harvard's big eleven this week, that will be something else again.

Coach Cleo expresses himself as none too sanguine. But Cleo is wont to express himself that way. The cloud must be turned inside out before Cleo will admit it has anything that faintly resembles a silver lining. It was that way with Cleo last year and two years ago, on each of which occasions a little bit of luck would have turned Harvard's 3 to 0 triumphs into Holy Cross victories.

Two "almost victories" over Harvard in such rapid succession, is quite a stunt for an institution the size of Holy Cross and the law of averages militates against a third such remarkable showing in as many years. Still, you never can tell. Cleo teaches man fashion football and is a wonder at keying up his athletes and keeping them so keyed from start to finish of their big tests. Then he has a super footballer in Mahaney, who alternates at end, fullback, tackle, etc., etc.

Mahaney hails from Maine. Before he entered Holy Cross one year ago, he played fullback for Coburn Classical Institute, in fact he is credited with having put the "toot" in that institute. Princeton sought his services and the athletically concerned alumni of several other colleges endeavored to interest the young man in the various and sundry attractions—libraries courses in Hebraic law, European architecture, etc.—of their respective alma maters. It is reported they have continued to do so but Mahaney picked out Holy Cross last year and is back on the job this year and expects to rebuff his tempters for two more whirls of the calendar.

Clothed only in Nature's during [illegible] Mahaney weighs 185 pounds and it is said that statues of Apollo become strangely coated with verdigris whenever Mahaney's fair form is in close juxtaposition—whatever that means.

As Aristotle might have remarked he is a sweet specimen. When he is playing defensive end he cracks [illegible] and lays [illegible] down in most approved [illegible] [illegible] downright fashion, when he plays offensive fullback, he barges the opposing line with unction and gusto and [illegible] 185 pounds—a tough combat [illegible] say we. Then if the opposition is bearing down too hard upon a Holy Cross tackle, guard or centre, Mahaney can step into any of the three positions and command the opposition's respect.

Harvard kept two men on Mahaney last year. Maybe the Crimson will put three men on him Saturday. But if he is not too sorely hedged about by red jerseys, it will be worth the price of admission, simply to watch Mahaney work. Football is Mahaney's meat. He loves it.

Golembeski, an end; McGrath, a tackle; Heavy, a guard; Riopel, a fullback, together with Mahaney and Simendinger, are the first string veterans who are on hand for another cruise against the Crimson.

BREAKS IN OPENING GAME MAY DECIDE WORLD SERIES

LUCK A BIG FACTOR IN TITLE BATTLES

By NICK FLATLEY.

Getting the breaks, as they call the luck of it, means a lot in any baseball game; just about means victory in a World's Series where two teams that have survived the uproar and shock of a six months' campaign strive for supremacy. Where fortune perches, victory generally rests.

If the Giants have all the luck of the first game—hammer Joe Bush or Carl Mays for instance—they will career down through the little stretch of games armed with a confidence that will be tough to dissipate.

If the Yanks get away on the right foot, should the Babe bust one into the stands with a couple on early tomorrow afternoon, they will be out in front with a handicap that nothing but super baseball can explode.

Once a team gets momentum through good fortune, chance seems to trail right along with it. The old game is all speckled with examples. Recall the time when Merkle failed to touch second and let the Cubs win a pennant. They went into a series on baseball's dizziest fluke and collected plenty of glory.

The same Merkle lost an easy foul in 1912, at Fenway Park, and the Red Sox consequently became world's champs. In '14, in the very first inning of the first game between the Braves and the Athletics, big Charlie Schmidt hauled down a hard foul fly, shot a perfect throw to third base, and completed an almost impossible double play. That shocked Connie Mack's stars undoubtedly. They had been expecting a walkover. Before they recovered from their surprise, they were licked roundly and soundly.

These are but few instances. The breaks mean almost as much as the pitching or anything else. Usually, though, they come to the team that is alert and looking for them. The boys who are willing to try anything, to take the long chances, are the birds who come through.

Giants, Rather Than Yanks, Who Will Bang at Luck

And in the rapidly approaching clash, it will be the Giants rather than the American Leaguers who will be assaulting the luck of the game. McGraw has the speed on his team. There's hardly a Giant, who cannot score standing up from second on an ordinary single. There are a few Yanks so heavy of foot that unless the situation is desperate, they never try to get past third.

The little edge of the extra base on a hit or an error means a whole lot in a tight series. It is a fact that the games lost by a single run in a season if shifted to the victory side of the ledger, would make a pennant winner out of any tailender. Big league ball clubs compare almost identically—there is just the merest shade between the leader and the cellar owner.

That we think was evidenced full well in the series last week, where the Yanks were mighty fortunate to win the last of three games from the Red Sox and thereby clinch the pennant. Half a dozen times in that final fray, any kind of a hit would have upset the dope and the baseball world would now be boiling up about the playoff with the Browns.

These Yankees are a good fielding dangerous, straight-away hitting ball club. When they jump a pitcher they ruin him quickly, but when they're repressed at the bat, they don't figure to be especially brilliant at squeezing out a victory, through speed on the bases or variety of assault.

Combine a Vicious Attack With Adaptability to Switch

The Giants on the other hand, combine a vicious straight attack with a fine adaptability to switch to anything the occasion may require. They have the sprinters who can scamper ahead on the pillows when there's the least little hostile juggling of the ball. They can worry the other fellows all the time. And worry doesn't do a bit of good to a team that's all keyed up with the strain of a big clash.

The Yanks must always be on the lookout for the unexpected; the Giants will not have to bother much about anything except conventional baseball. It's a lot like a fair boxer with a deadly wallop, stacked up against a scientific guy, who also packs a lights-out punch. Whoever can sneak over the first haymaker gets the long end of the purse. And the odds favor the scrapper who is the best dodger.

Lack of a good southpaw pitcher is likely to be felt by the American Leaguers before the series is stuck in the icechest. McGraw can send in a mean flock of left-hand hitters, an entire lineup, excepting Meusel, Kelly and Groh, who can smatter any kind of flinging naturally.

Stengel and Smith Gives Mac What He Needs Against Speed

Stengel in the outfield and Smith behind the bat, give the little Napoleon the kind of an array that any manager needs against fast ball pitching, such as the Yanks will provide. In addition, the Giants' three big pitchers, at least they figure to be, are all real batsmen. Nehf, Barnes and Scott all swing from the offside of the plate, and the three of them are dangerous with the war club. They round out an assault that goes through the whole nine men. There's not what you could call a weak sister in sight.

Mays and Bush hit well, for the Yanks, but not so consistently as their rivals just mentioned. The National Leaguers will have a little steadier attack, if the boys go along normally, which they probably will fail to do. The Giants, though, with no spitballers or southpaws to worry them, should do a whole lot of hitting in this series.

So should the Yanks, and they probably will, but as we look at it, the more versatile and trickier McGraw batting system will play a big part in the ultimate story of the fracas.

Considering the athletes, man for man you could hardly ask for a better hitting pair of teams. Just take a peek at the batting averages of the outfits during the exciting season:

Snyder,c.	.338	Scott,s.s	.272
Smith,c	.278

These are the regulars who will be in there all the time, barring accident. With the short right and left fields in the Polo Grounds and the present rabbit baseball there should be many a long thump bounce off their bats to give the gang a chance to vent delight in raucous yells.

So much for the batting. The Giants have hit a bit harder throughout the year, have two more 300 regulars than the Yanks, and own the assault that, on paper at least is the most dangerous in the world for right-hand pitchers. Against this the Yanks have to figure that Ruth will be more or less of a dud in the games that Nehf chucks. Arthur is a great southpaw, when he's in a tough game, and he won't give the big Bam any good ones to shoot at.

In the field the Giants likewise loom up as the better club. The catching end is about even. Schang is a fine backstop ending his best year, but he hasn't a thing mechanically on Snyder and Smith, who will smother the McGraw curves.

Kelly is a better first baseman than Pipp, though the last named is no slouch. But George can range a bit farther and possesses a throwing arm that makes him invaluable in the matter of relaying pegs from the garden to cut down runners at the plate. Frisch, the Giant second baseman, is the greatest of the game's younger stars. Ward, his rival, is a very dependable bird, but he doesn't class with the Fordham Flash for a minute. At this one spot is the only outstanding superiority manifest as regards the fielding part of it.

Our old friend Everett Scott is still the same marvelous workman at shortstop. He has the perfect temperament for series play, but with all his greatness he isn't better than Bancroft in the field, by more than eyelash or something. Banny can do anything that Scotty can, lacking perhaps just a little of the Deacon's steadiness.

The two greatest third basemen in the game will have a little battle of their own. Groh and Dugan rank all the other hot corner heroes, and trying to rate one above the other would merely start one of those endless arguments. Both are brilliant at all times, with diminutive Heinie inclined to be a little steadier, perhaps. But Jumping Joe's longer reach just offsets that difference.

The Giant outfield individually and collectively is a better collection than the Yankee.

Emil Meusel in left, while not the greatest fly chaser in the world, can get anything his brother Robert might reach. And on balls hit between fields, he's a bit faster starter than big Bob. The latter has a fine throwing arm, but just the same we'd rather have Emil on our ball club in a tough tilt.

Witt rates about evenly with either Cunningham or Stengel, who park themselves in centre field for the Giants. He'll cover a little more ground than the perennial "Casey," and not so much as the younger Cunningham, and either of the Giants can outthrow him.

The great Bambino is just a right fielder, who holds down a job because of his well known bludgeon. The Giant Young can give him cards and spades in the matter of fielding, and then be away ahead.

Taken as a whole, the Giant gardeners work together more smoothly, and are more certain death to hits that have to be pursued with real speed. If it comes down to a point where outfielding will settle it, the Giants will repeat beyond any doubt.

Giants All Ready to Repeat Great 1921 Victory

By DAVE BANCROFT, Captain of the Giants.

New York, Oct. 3.—The Giants are ready to repeat their victory of last year over the Yankees as the 1922 World's Series championship is about to open.

Right at the start let me say that all this talk about the Giants having a shortage of pitchers doesn't amount to much. During the season a staff of pitchers is essential, but in a short series such as the World's Series is, two good pitchers can do all the work that's needed.

As for the Giants, who came through to the top of the National League after losing some of its pitching staff, what's the matter with winning the series with Nehf, Scott and Barnes on the mound?

True, we have to fear the hitting of Ruth and Meusel most. But I think our hurlers can attend to stopping them.

The records show

That the Giants are hitting .308 against .293 for the Yankees.

That the Giants field .972, while the Yanks' average is .971.

That the Giants' infield, consisting of Kelly, Frisch, Groh and myself, is stronger than that of the Yanks.

That the outfield, with Emil Meusel, Stengel and Young, is superior to the Yanks.

And—

That we have a manager named McGraw.

BRACKMAN NAMED FOR QUARTER

English High School's football team will have Manuel Brackman, the sturdy little quarterback, on the job this season, now that the Dorchester lad has shaken off the jinx that has followed in his footsteps the past two years.

Manuel Brackman

Manuel has been termed the "hard luck kid" in scholastic circles because of the ailments that befell him just when he gets started in any branch of sport. He is feeling fit this season and hopes to pilot the English High team to a second championship in the Boston High School League.

There are few youngsters in the game who have the ability of Brackman. He is the man for the big crisis, as he proved on many occasions. Coach Fred Murray is well aware of this fact and plans to use Brackman as his first string "signal caller."

MILLSTREAMS

The Millstreams of Chelsea are represented by a strong team. They have been fortunate in securing the services of 'Beanie Simpson' of Somerville High and Rhode Island fame; Dina 'Riordan, who starred with Somerville High and Tufts, and Tobey, the crack centre of last year's Rhode Island State team. The manager is busy arranging a schedule and is desirous of hearing from any fast semi-pro outfit in this State. Write to Millstream S. & A. Club, Broadway, Chelsea, or call Chelsea 2663 M.

Playerboard Will Help You on Series

A playerboard, similar to the electric scoreboards used to report ball games, will be published in tomorrow's Boston American to assist you in listening to the radio report of the World's Series games.

This board, coupled with the story of the plays as they are told by radio, will enable you to follow the games almost as closely as if you sat in a reserved seat at the Polo Grounds.

The story of the games as told by Nick Flatley, Sid Mercer, Sam Crane, Damon Runyon, Gene Fowler and Davis J. Walsh exclusively for the American, will be broadcasted from a microphone placed in the American office near the special telegraph wire from the Polo Grounds. The microphone will be connected with another special wire with the Amrad Station, WGI, so that the reports of the plays will be broadcasted within a few minutes of the time when they actually occur.

RED SOX TRADE COLLINS AND PRATT

New York, Oct. 3.—The rumor around the hotels here, on the eve of the World's Series [illegible] Red Sox have traded [illegible] their best pitcher and [illegible] Derrill Pratt, the second [illegible] the Detroit club for $35,000 and Pitcher Howard Ehmke and [illegible] Holling or Clark. He plans to use Pratt until Chick Gagnon, the Holy Cross star, develops to the major league standard.

Yanks Going to Win the Series, Says Captain Scott

By EVERETT SCOTT, Captain of the Yankees.

New York, Oct. 3.—The Yankees are going to win the world's championship. That is a confident prediction. The basis for it can be enumerated thus:

1.—A burning desire to win to avenge last year's defeat by the Giants.

2.—The well-known ability of the Yankees to clear their record after a slump by brilliantly coming back.

Babe Ruth, Bob Shawkey, Meusel and Pipp.

There are other factors than those four men that will help in winning.

BETTING EVEN ON WORLD'S SERIES

You cannot get a ticket for the World's Series at either the Giants or Yankee headquarters. Of course the dear old speculators have a few pasteboards which they are peddling out at fabulous sums.

An effort will be made to prevent the speculators getting control of the rush seats. When a person buys a rush ticket he will be obliged to enter the baseball orchard. This will make it impossible for speculators to secure tickets from those persons who are willing to wait in line.

While New York is very much interested in the big series there are few out-of-town fans on hand for the games. In 1921 this city was besieged by fans from all parts of the United States. This Fall there is apparently little interest in the series outside of New York. Apparently baseball fans have tired of highly commercialized sport.

As these lines are handed to the tender mercies of the telegraph operator, it looks as though Nehf would open for the Giants, while Joe Bush would do the hurling for the Yankees.

LIEB DECLARES DOPE FAVORS YANKEES

By FREDERICK G. LIEB.

In a final summing up of our World's Series facts and figures, the outstanding fact is the greatly superior strength of the Yankee pitching staff over that of the Giants. Had Douglas remained straight and on the level, this superiority would not have been so noticeable. McQuillan, the young pitcher purchased from Boston at considerable expense, hardly has taken the place of the expelled Shuffler on the New York National playing roster.

However McGraw's clever [illegible] of the pitchers at his disposal has enabled him to win his eighth pennant [illegible] that pitching staff into another world's championship. The dope says no, but world's championships are decided on the ball field.

There is only one other case of the same team meeting in World's Series in succeeding years. It happened before [illegible] when the [illegible] whipped the Detroit Tigers. Detroit got only one [illegible] the two series. The Athletics [illegible] the Giants in 1911 [illegible] big series in 1912 but defeated McGraw's team even more decisively when they met again in 1913.

This does not [illegible] does show that when a team once has won a world's series [illegible] up at the expense of a rival [illegible] no difficulty in retaining that honor when called upon to defend it against [illegible] That [illegible] the hope of Giant fans in New York.

"The Giants licked [illegible] last year and they can do it again [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] is an improvement in centre over [illegible] Miller.

Mays of course [illegible] the pitcher he was [illegible] the [illegible] Yanks [illegible] Shawkey is a 100 per cent better pitcher now than he was on the eve of the big games last Fall.

Outside of pitching, the Giants are about as strong as they were a year ago, but their attack is no stronger. Groh on paper looks like a better man than Rawlings, but Heine finished the season in a bad slump and he will have to go some to beat Rawlings' world's series record of last year.

The records show that the Giants have a considerably stronger attack. McGraw's men are hitting .303, [illegible] against [illegible] for the Yanks. In fielding there is little to choose between the rival New York champions. The Giants field .972, against .971 for their Yankee rival.

McGraw, of course, resorts to more of a base running game than [illegible] The Giants have stolen 96 steals against 60 for the American Leaguers. It is interesting to note how evenly the two clubs are matched in slugging. The Giants have [illegible] doubles, 75 triples and 69 [illegible] against 204 doubles, 70 triples and 88 home runs for Huggins' cohorts.

A year ago, when the Yankees [illegible] home runs and the Giants 75 [illegible] was predicted that the series [illegible] carnival of [illegible] yet only four were hit [illegible] Snyder, Emil Meusel and Fewster crowding three [illegible] the sixth game. This year we [illegible] that the bleachers and [illegible] grandstand will be bombarded [illegible] more than was the case a year ago.

The dope favors the Yankees, but who can tell what surprise McGraw will spring on the fans this year?

JEALOUS SUITOR PLANNED DEATH OF MIDDLEBORO GIRL

CAN SHE MAKE IT! SIG- nificant whisperings of racing craft experts from Boston to Eastport, Me., point to the "Elizabeth Howard" as the probable winner of the American trial races off Gloucester beginning Oct 12. Mariners base their conclusion on her rigging and sturdiness and feel confident that she will trim her Canadian rivals. The schooner, which will be piloted by Capt. SLAIN GIRL LAUGHED at Middleboro Policeman's Threat to Kill Her! Diagram at top shows how Charles F. Haggerty lured the girl's brother, Arthur (circle at left), from the house by a ruse to carry out his plan. Right circle shows Charles Willett, the girl's father. Acting Chief of Police Alden Rogers is shown at right with the death revolver.

"IT CAN'T BE DONE!" THAT'S WHAT PROFES- sional divers declared when young Alfred J. Nunes of East Boston offered to extricate himself a la Houdini from a regulation diving suit. Al, who has baffled the experts before, was in the suit and out again in ten minutes. They locked him up in a building of the Crandall Engineering Company, East Boston, for the test. Nunes is shown in the centre, with James McInness, left, and Roland Hulsman fastening him into the suit.

When Knighthood Was in Flower

by Charles Major

READ IT AGAIN!

Start This World-Famous Story Today

The story opens with an account of the Caskoden family, one of whom, Edwin—who tells the story of Princess Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon—holds a place at the court of Henry VIII. News of a terrible duel reaches the King Of four combatants, only two come out alive, one so horribly disfigured that he might better have been killed. The survivor, Charles Brandon, is much talked about for his heroism.

The Princess Mary (Marion Davies) tells her brother, Henry VIII., she will never marry the King of France. Scene in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which comes to the Park Theatre October 22.

THIS Judson was a Scotch gentleman of whom very little was known except that he was counted the most deadly and most cruel duelist of the time. He was called the "Walking Death," and it is said took pride in the appellation. He boasted that he had fought eighty-seven duels, in which he had killed seventy-five men, and it was considered certain death to meet him. I got the story of the duel afterwards from Brandon as I give it here.

John was the elder bro[illegible] and when the [illegible] was entitled to fight first a birthright out of which Charles tried in vain to talk him. The brothers told their father, Sir William Brandon, and at the appointed time father and sons repaired to the place of meeting where they found Judson and his two seconds ready for the fight.

Sir William was still a vigorous man, with few equals in sword play, and the sons, especially the younger, were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] was Judson's [illegible] cruelty. [illegible] were so handicapped with this [illegible] [illegible] Mary [illegible]

It was a misty morning in March. Brandon has told me since that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] would have gone home.

Thereupon, Judson, with a malignant smile of triumph, deliberately selected his opponent's heart and pierced it with his sword, giving the blade a twist as he drew it out in order to cut and mutilate the more.

In an instant Sir William's doublet was off, and he was in his dead son's tracks, ready to avenge him or [illegible]. Again the [illegible] which should have killed broke the sword and the father died as the son had died.

After [illegible] came young Charles, expecting it, so great was his strong heart, not one whit fearing to lie beside his dead father and brother. He knew he was the [illegible] of both in strength and skill, and his knowledge of men and the noble art told him they [illegible] each been the superior of [illegible], but the fellow's hand seemed to be the hand of death. An opening came through Judson's unskilful pass which gave young Brandon an opportunity for a thrust to kill, but his blade, like his father's and brother's, bent double without penetrating. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Aware of this, Brandon knew that victory was his and that soon he would have avenged the murders that had gone before. He saw that his adversary was strong neither in wind nor arm, and had not the skill to penetrate his guard in a week's trying, so he determined to fight on the defensive until Judson's strength should wane, and then kill him when and how he chose.

After a time Judson began to breathe hard and his thrusts to lack force.

"Boy, I would spare you," he said. "I have killed enough of your tribe—put up your sword and call it quits."

Young Brandon replied. "Stand your ground, you coward; you will be a dead man as soon as you grow a little weaker; if you try to run I will thrust you through the neck as I would a cur. Listen how you snort. I shall soon have you; you are almost gone. You would spare me, would you?—I could preach a sermon or dance a hornpipe while I am killing you. I will not break my sword against your coat of mail, but will wait until you fall from weakness and then. . . . Fight, you bloodhound!"

Judson was pale from exhaustion, and his breath was coming in gasps as he tried to keep the [illegible] sword from his throat. At last, by a dexterous twist of his blade, Brandon sent Judson's sword flying thirty feet away. The fellow started to run but turned again to fight for his life. Brandon's reply was a flashing circle of steel and his sword point cut lengthwise through Judson's eyes and the bridge of his nose, leaving him sightless and hideous for life. A revenge compared to which death would have been merciful.

The duel created a sensation throughout the kingdom, for although little was known as to who Judson was, his fame as a duelist was as broad as the land. He had been at court upon several occasions, and, at one time, upon the king's birthday, had fought in the royal lists. So the matter came in for its share of consideration by king and courtiers, and young Brandon became a person of interest.

He became still more so when some gentlemen who had served with him in the continental wars told the court of his daring and bravery, and related stories of deeds at arms worthy of the best knight in Christendom.

He had an uncle at the court, Sir Thomas Brandon, the king's Master of Horse, who thought it a good opportunity to put his nephew forward and let him take his chance at winning royal favor. The uncle broached the subject to the king, with favorable issue, and Charles Brandon, led by the hand of fate, came to London Court, where that same fate had in keeping for him events such as seldom fall to the lot of man.

When we learned that Brandon was coming to court every one believed he would soon gain the king's favor. How much that would amount to none could tell, as the king's favorites were of many sorts and taken from all conditions of men. There was Master Wolsey, a butcher's son, whom he had first made almoner, then chief counselor and Bishop of Lincoln, soon to be Bishop of York and Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church.

From the other extreme of life came young Thomas, Lord Howard, heir to the Earl of Surrey, and my Lord of Buckingham, premier peer of the realm. Then sometimes would the king take a yeoman of the guard and make him his companion in jousts and tournaments, solely because of his brawn and bone. There were others whom he kept close by him in the palace because of their wit and the entertainment they furnished, of which class was I, and, I flatter myself, no mean member.

To begin with, being in no way dependent on the king for money, I never drew a farthing from the royal treasury. This, you may be sure, did me no harm, for although the king sometimes delighted to give, he always hated to pay. There were other good reasons, too, why I should be a favorite with the king. Without meaning to be vain, I think I may presume to say, with perfect truth, that my conversation and manners were far more pleasing and polished than were usual at that day in England, for I made it a point to spend several weeks each year in the noble French capital, the home and centre of good-breeding and politeness.

My appointment as Master of the Dance, I am sure, was owing entirely to my manner. My brother, the baron, who stood high with the King, was not friendly toward me because my father had seen fit to bequeath me so good a competency in place of giving it all to the first born and leaving me dependent upon the tender mercies of an elder brother. So I had no help from him nor from any one else. I was quite small of stature and, therefore, unable to compete, with lance and mace, with bulkier men; but I would bet with any man, of my size, on any game, at any place and time, in any amount; and, if I do say it, who perhaps should not, I basked in the light of many a fair smile which larger men had sighed for in vain.

I did not know when Brandon first came to London. We had all remained at Greenwich while the King went up to Westminster to waste his time with matters of state and quarrel with the Parliament, then sitting, over the amount of certain subsidies.

Mary, the King's sister, then some eighteen or nineteen years of age, a perfect bud, just blossoming into a perfect flower, had gone over to Windsor on a visit to her elder sister, Margaret of Scotland, and the palace was dull enough. Brandon, it seems, had been presented to Henry during this time, at Westminster, and had, to some extent at least, become a favorite before I met him. The first time I saw him was at a joust given by the King at Westminster, in celebration of the fact that he had coaxed a good round subsidy out of Parliament.

Man and Maid —by Elinor Glyn

What Has Gone Before

Sir Nicholas Thormonde, a wealthy Englishman, wounded and blinded in one eye in action, starts writing his diary in Paris while the war is still on. He is sick of life. The war has robbed it of all that a young man can find of joy. He tries to amuse himself in the company of several women friends, who, he feels, seek his company for his money and not for the love he craves. He starts to write a book and hires a typist, Miss Sharp. He falls in love with her and [illegible] on the "Fluffles."

I WOULD have been angry, only there was something humorous in the way everyone seems to think I am incapable of managing my own affairs! What is it they all want of me—? Not that I should be happy in my own way, but that I should contribute to their happiness—they want to participate in what my money is able to procure and they do not want interference from outside.

Every one of my friends—and relations—would be hostile if I were to announce that I was in love with Miss Sharp, and wanted to marry her—even though it was proved to them that she was pretty—a perfect lady, intelligent [illegible]. She is not of their set and might, and probably would, be a stumbling block in their path when they wished to make use of me—so she would be [illegible]

None of them would put it in that way, of course, their opposition would be [illegible] might even think they were sincere because they were thinking of my happiness.

Burton is the only person whose [illegible]

How about the little one? [illegible] [illegible] find out from Burton what was the [illegible] to my [illegible] and Alathea. Was [illegible] that time when [illegible] love and I saw [illegible] little figure in the passage? Could she have been thinking of her—?

By Thursday when there was no further news I began to feel so restless that I determined to go back to Paris the following week. It was all very well to be out in the park at Versailles with a mind at ease, but it feels too far away when I am so troubled.

I sent Burton in on Friday to Auteuil—

Just walk about near the [illegible] shop, Burton, and try to find out by every clue your not unintelligent old pate can invent where Miss Sharp lives, and what is happening. Then go to the Hotel de Courville and chat with the concierge—or whatever you think best—I simply can't stand hearing nothing!"

Burton pulled in his lips.

Very good, Sir Nicholas.

I tried to correct my book in the afternoon. I really am trying to do the things I feel she thinks would improve my character—but I am one gnawing ache for news—underneath is the fear that some complication may occur which will prevent her returning to me.

I find myself listening to every footstep in the passage in case it might be a telegram, so of course quite a number of messages and things were bound to come from utterly uninteresting sources to fill me with hope and then disappoint me—it is always like that.

I really was wild on Friday afternoon and if George Harcourt had not turned up—he is at the Trianon Palace now with the Supreme War Council—I don't know what I should have done with myself. Lots of those fellows would come and dine with me if I wanted them, some are even old pals—but I am out of tune with my kind.

George was very amusing.

"My dear boy," he said, "Violetta is upsetting all my calculations—she has refused everything I have offered her—But I fear she is showing me much devotion."

This seemed a great calamity to him.

"It is terribly dangerous, that, Nicholas, because you know my dear boy, when a woman shows [illegible] devotion a man's [illegible] [illegible] shows him caprice, [illegible] [illegible] that he will offer her the [illegible] highest honor!"

"George, you impossible cynic!"

"Not at all. I am merely a student of human instincts and character [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and toleration of Christ."

This was quite a new view of the subject.

He went on:

"You see, when men philosophise about women, they are generally unjust, taking the subject from the standpoint that whatever frailties they have, the sense—neither sex is exempt—from them. Now that is nonsense—neither sex is exempt—and neither sex as a rule will contemplate or admit its failings.

For instance, the sense of abstract truth in the noblest woman never prevents her lying for her lover or her child, yet she thinks herself quite honest. In the noblest man the sense is so strong that it enables him to make only the one exception, that of invariably lying to the woman!"

I laughed——he puffed one of my pre-war cigars.

"Women have no natural sense of truth, they only rise to it through sublime effort"——

"And men?"

"It is ingrained in them, they only sink from it to cover their natural instincts of infidelity."

His voice was contemplative now—

"How we lie to the little darlings, Nicholas! How we tell them we have no time to write—when, of course, we have always time if we really want to—we never are at a loss for the moments before the creatures are a secure possession!"

"The whole thing gets back to the hunting instinct, my dear George—I can't see that one can be blamed for it—"

"I am not blaming, I am merely analyzing. Have you remarked that when a man feels perfectly secure about the woman he will give his hours of duty to his country, his hours of leisure to his friends who flatter him, and the crumbs snatched from either to the poor lady of his heart! But if she excites his sense, and remains problematic, he will skimp his duty, neglect his friends, and snatch even hours from sleep to spend them in her company!"

"You don't think then that there is something higher and beyond all this in love, George?—something which you and I have never come across perhaps?"

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—By ANN LISLE

I CONTROLLED myself, however, and managed a seemingly placid

"I'M GLAD YOU BOTH GOT HERE SO PROMPTLY—"

"I'm glad you both got here so promptly. I was impatient to get news of Daisy and so I'd have hated waiting around. Now, Carl, please relieve two anxious friends. How's Daisy—and where is she?"

With a twist of his lips I couldn't fully decipher, Carl turned to Tom and flung out

"You also are anxious to assure yourself of Daisy's welfare?"

"Very," replied Tom gravely.

"Would you care to—diagnose your interest in the matter?" demanded Carl, and then his look of irritation and chagrin suggested that he'd take back the words, if that could be managed.

"Daisy Cordon is a clever girl," replied Tom with a sort of weary patience. "She was faithful to her work and very successful in it. I admired her for her ability and liked her for her sweetness."

"And if anything happened to her—you'd feel badly?" asked Carl, on the verge of a sneer.

"Very," replied Tom quietly.

"Because you'd reproach yourself—for overworking her or anything like that?" demanded Carl.

As if he were taking his cue from the other man's words, Tom replied:

"I was guilty of burdening her with a mass of detail that must have been almost staggering at times. And she had a lot of responsibility. If Daisy has broken down it's because I hadn't sense enough to see that there are—limits to what a delicate, eager, high-strung girl can stand."

"Precisely," agreed Carl, and I had a feeling that he in turn was taking his cue. "There are limits to what a high-strung girl can stand. Daisy didn't appreciate her own limitations. She—gave too much. Flung herself into her work you might say. Inevitable result—nervous breakdown."

Again I had a feeling that the two men were appraising each other. They seemed to be coming to some sort of tacit agreement. It was as if they had to settle things between themselves before admitting me to their inner circle. With a feeling that I was eavesdropping I tried to shut off my perceptions and take in no more than was meant for me.

"Now that we've cleared away all the dead wood," said Carl smoothly, "we're ready to talk. Of course, you folks know that Daisy's helped herself to a much-needed vacation. That's what she meant it to be. But I think now it's going to amount to quitting a job that was too much for her."

"Oh, she mustn't give up," I began, stifling the exclamation on my lips as Tom bowed his head gravely and said:

"If you think that's the best I suppose Mrs. Harrison and I, as the rest of the counsel of Daisy's three friends, must at least hear your reasons."

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No other Laxative can replace Dr. Caldwell's in the confidence of those who use it

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grownups, so compounded that elderly people, who are constantly forced to take a laxative because the intestinal muscles are weakening, find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world. The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I want you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mr. J. B. Belk of Shaw, Miss., relies on it entirely to keep his children in health, and Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Jersey City, N. J., declares that not only herself but all her neighbors and friends use it and tell others about it. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

"Mary" ROMANCE OF A BOSTON BUSINESS GIRL

By Elenore Meherin

Start This Story Today

MARY KELLY wins the post of private secretary to HALL DAWSON, a dynamic promoter with offices in Water street. She instinctively fears him. After the conclusion of a big deal he calls her his mascot and gives her a check for $100, which she accepts with misgivings. Reassured by Dawson, however, she plunges into her work, dreaming of the day she will be his partner. Mary goes to see the parade of the returning Yankee Division and meets PAT SULLIVAN, her childhood sweetheart. JACK MAHONEY, a young millionaire, declares his love for her. Pat takes Mary riding and she realizes she loves him only. She receives a letter of proposal from Mahoney and answers it with a refusal. Pat has a row with Dawson. Mary sits for her portrait to Allan Bruce. Dawson insults her at his house and Mrs. Dawson orders her out. She receives a letter from Pat telling her he loves her. She gets a new job. Mary's mother dies and Allan performs many kind services.

"DOESN'T my cooking suit you, darling?" I had broiled a steak for him and served it with toast and fried potatoes to give him a treat. I thought he would relish it.

"You're the best girl a father ever had, Mary." He reached out his hand and covered mine. "But it is so lonesome, just us two here."

Dad was going down to Delia's after dinner.

"Will you come, dear?"

"I want to finish this packing. Anyway, Allan is coming over for a little while."

Last night when I had thought of Pat, and he had seemed so near, so strong, so kind, everything connected with Allan and the studio was vague, unreal, artificial. I was ashamed of his attraction for me. Now I was glad he was coming.

"I'll take you for a ride, Mona," he said, as I opened the door. "A long lost uncle of mine turned up and loaned me his car.

"I wonder if you're going to miss me, Mona?"

"Oh, I will; I wish you weren't going!"

"What happened today, Mona, that you talk like that? Your voice never sings any more. I haven't heard you laugh in months."

"Nothing unusual. I guess I'll have to be gay again; men do so hate the queen of tragedy."

"You'll wear no mask with me, little Mona! Tell me, did you lose your job or your heart?"

"Both!" I tried to banter, but he wouldn't have it, and soon I had told him about the job and that I was going to June's. "I don't know what I'm going to do!" I said desperately.

"Couldn't you trust me, Mona? Oh, I could be as true to you! See that star up there?" His arms tightened. "As long as that shines I would love you. Do you believe it?"

"Oh, I don't know. Men say so many things."

"And I say more than most, but what I say to you I mean.

"Tell me, could you come with me?"

"I don't love you."

"I know it—what you feel for me is near enough to love. You would love me. Do you know why? Because you would bring out whatever of goodness, of power, is left in me. I would achieve. You would have for me the feeling of love, of devotion, of glory, that a mother has in her child, for I would become the creature of your soul. That's not fancy—women love to mother a man—

"And I would often be impatient and absent-minded and neglectful because I would lose myself in my work, but you would understand and I would make it up to you. Oh," he said, suddenly lowering his head, drawing me to him, kissing me, "I love you, love you. You will come?

"Forgive me, beloved," instantly he was sorry, saying no more about it until we were at the door and he was looking at me with a tender mocking smile.

"You aren't coming, little Mona. I've known that. But, remember this—if ever you should change, one word would bring me from the other end of the world to you, my own, my heart, my life—"

He held me close and I was crying.

Then he was gone and I was in my room, packing this and that into a suitcase; going to the window and sitting there; walking about the room, half frantic, thinking—

If I went with him! If I went with him! The nobility of him, the vivid power would bear its magnificent fruit.

If I went—oh, but I wasn't. I was just thinking—

I didn't know then that to dally with temptation is to yield to it.

He knew me better—far better than I knew myself or else he loved me more than I believed. Perhaps it was both. Week after week he had put off going and in those weeks of desperate loneliness, of grief that was not resigned and gentle, but bitter, protesting, I had grown to look for him, to need him. All the finest traits of his reckless, generous nature had been uppermost. The fascination I had always felt for Allan Bruce became a deeper, truer thing and had my heart been free I would have loved him. He knew that. Did he know that waiting might bring me to him? I've often wondered.

That night when we sat in the park my mind had yielded to the lure of his tongue.

In the turbulence of the last week, again and again I had assured myself that I would not hear. But my mind obstinately refused to admit the fact. I would take out the little Lorraine ring and relive that night at Bologna's when he had refused the cross to Teresa Brady. I remember the caution the old woman had given him. "For the one girl, if you ever find her." And then the card he had sent with it. "For you, my little pal." Each time I looked at that ring, each time I read again the ardent protests of that last letter of his, I was strengthened in my conviction—he still must care for me.

And—now, tonight, with Allan's pleading voice in my ears—"if you should change, remember I will come from the end of the world to you"—I was still thinking of Pat; still counting on the morrow. I would keep on waiting, keep on fooling myself that he had not heard; that he might have taken a little trip. He would have to come and shout in my face that he was done with me before I would believe it. That was my kind of pride!

"Men do so hate the queen of tragedy"

I sat in the disordered room, pushing my chair close to the window. I could see only a patch of the sky and now it was a warm, tender blue all spattered with stars, as though some gracious spirit had passed and strewn them there. I went to sleep hoping, certain that Friday would put an end to my waiting.

And it did. I got up early and dressed, intending to go again to the typewriter companies, then I decided to wait at home. They had my telephone number. Miss Garrison would call me if there was any chance to substitute; if any good job was offered. It was a waste of time to call there day after day. But the real reason for my decision was the unreasoning, deep-rooted feeling that a letter would come today. I wanted to be at home to receive it.

As soon as dad was gone I went through the house, stacking boxes in order, sweeping out the bare rooms. Then I sat down in the parlor to wait for the postman.

He rang. I waited. He rang again and then I heard him slipping letters under the door. Still I didn't move. I was afraid to look at them; afraid to face another disappointment.

But then I went out quietly and picked them up. There was a postcard for June, a circular from the union for dad and a big package from Allan Bruce.

I took the package and went into the kitchen, sitting at the table. Again that cold, steely desperation nerved me. I opened the package. There were seven or eight sketches and little water colors I had admired, and a letter.

Mona Beloved:

I know that you have turned to me in loneliness and not in love. If ever that sadness becomes greater than you can bear; if ever it will be a solace to know that some one needs and worships you, then come to me. I will be waiting—

I will not leave my house until 9 o'clock tonight. If only you might send some word to me!

I love you, Mona. The love of you has brought a clean beauty to my life. Things that were dead have come to being at the touch of your pure, beautiful soul. I love you. I have never given my heart to another. I never can.

Keep these pictures, Mona. If I have anything else you want, it is yours for the asking.

The rest of my life holds one interest for me—the moment when I will see you again.—Allan.

Tears blurred my eyes, softened the anger in my heart. Pity for Allan Bruce, sadness that he was leaving—

I looked over the sketches.

I decided to go out and take a walk. Some crafty instinct led me down by the corner of the Brady home. They had just returned from New York.

Teresa's car, the lavender sedan, freshly painted, stood in front of the house. Suddenly their door opened. Quickly, breathelssly, I crossed the street, walking deliberately before the house. Teresa and her mother were coming down the steps.

"Good morning, Miss Kelly," Mrs. Brady said pleasantly. Teresa extended her hand with a languid grace.

"I was so sorry to hear of your dear mother's death."

Of all the expressions of sympathy none ever struck to the heart as that did. I stood quivering, unable to speak.

"My dear child," Mrs. Brady held my hand. "You mustn't let it crush you so. You've lost all your lovely color. Are you staying home now?"

"Oh, no; we're just moving. I took the day off. I have a few errands," I hurried, bitterly regretting the folly that had brought me there.

"We're going downtown, Mary. Get in and ride with us." Teresa opened the door of the car. I got in.

"Did you have a pleasant trip in New York?" I said, trying to rouse myself, not wishing Mrs. Brady's pitying eyes on me.

"Oh, did we? Just glorious! But isn't it perfectly wonderful about Pat? Of course, I told him it was no surprise to me. We had the jolliest time! I'm going to give a great homecoming party for him."

"He hasn't left New York yet?" I ventured.

"Oh, no. He hasn't wired me yet. He'll leave in a short time, and he won't return to New York in a hurry, I told him. I'm sorry you can't be with us at the homecoming!"

"I guess I haven't much heart for rejoicing," I laughed. "Here is where I'm shopping. Thanks for the lift."

I went into the first store and sat on a little stool at the counter.

"What do you want?" the salesgirl asked.

"Nothing," I answered, and ran out of the place.

I don't know whether my heart was broken or my mind gone.

I ran, dashing into the house, flinging myself on the bed, hiding my face in the pillow.

"Isn't it perfectly wonderful about Pat? Oh, we had the jolliest time! He hasn't wired me yet." That rich, caressing voice, lilted, repeated, mocked in my ears.

I sat up, leaning against the pillows, pressing my hands to my forehead. He was in New York, he had received my telegram. I began to laugh.

"Oh, yes he still cares for you! He's a walking skeleton waiting for you. Did he ever get your letter?—oh, no!"

In a panic of fear I stopped "I'm going mad," I thought. Maybe I am mad."

Teresa Brady would not allow him to go back to New York! And I had believed that letter of his. I had breathed and lived on his promise—"I love you. I will go on loving you always." But they had such jolly times together.

I closed my eyes. "Don't think—don't think," I kept saying. "Oh, why am I lying here?" But still I didn't move; still, like a living agony, my brain protested, cried out against its pain. It seemed to me that I would live there forever, motionless—a hot, throbbing ache with faces staring and mocking me.

"I went over to the bureau, Delia had left a jar of preserves, a dish of cakes and a note. I opened it quickly.

"Dear Mary

"I thought surely you were coming over last night. I wanted to talk to you. June tells me you aren't coming to her and now I'm sorry I opposed you in the beginning. You were right. It is a foolish move. I wish, dear, I had room for you, but with six children you wouldn't have much comfort. As long as you will not stay with her, and really, she hasn't room for you, I would not go at all. Make the break once and for all. There is a beautiful room you can get for $15 with Mrs. Logan. I did not see it, but Emily Hatton told me about it. You ought to look at it tonight. You and dad are coming over to me for dinner tomorrow night. I hope you enjoy the preserves.

"DELIA."

New Highs Set in Big Market as Oils, Rails and Specialties Lead in Upturn

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

The next president of the American Bankers' Association, now meeting ten thousand strong in New York, is to be J. H. Puelicher of Milwaukee. And a finer fellow does not walk in shoe leather.

Mr. Puelicher has been as keenly interested in satisfying his employes as in satisfying his customers. Mr. Puelicher is of the type who doesn't believe that a bank exists merely to take in deposits and lend them out again at as high rate of interest as possible. He believes that a banker should do all he can for his community and that, in doing it, a banker and those associated with him should get a maximum of happiness out of life and out of business.

He once said to me: "No business that exists solely for the purpose of making money for its stockholders can hope to be wholly successful."

"Why not?"

"For the same reason that no man who lives for himself alone can hope to reach the top of the ladder, a business institution is valuable to a community in so far as it serves the wants of the public, in so far as it provides for its employes opportunities for their advancement, as well as opportunities for earning a livelihood."

How his institution, the Marshall and Ilsley Bank, handles its employes during sickness and health, should be learned not only by other bankers, but by other employers throughout the country. A good many hard-headed financial and business men might call Mr. Puelicher's ideas utopian. Well, the answer is that his bank has prospered remarkably, and he is selected from 23,000 bankers to become the president of their national association.

A convention would be tame without a good, old-fashioned fight. The A. B. A. convention is staging a heavyweight set-to. The opponents are the advocates of branch banks and the anti-branch bankers.

Some of the more powerful national banks want to be allowed to open branches. A great many of the smaller banks are against any such move.

The cry was raised that legislation permitting national banks to dot a State with branches would lead to the acquisition of overwhelming banking power by "Wall Street."

The fight was started yesterday, but reporters were barred.

The opponents of branch banks claim that if the country were covered with branches of gigantic central institutions the small banks would suffer even a worse competition than small merchants suffer from mail order houses. They claim also that the fellows sent to run these branch banks would be in the community but not of the community, that they would not have the same knowledge or interest in local affairs, that local business men would have their applications for loans passed upon by officers and directors at headquarters by men not thoroughly conversant with local conditions.

There are unquestionably many and strong objections to transforming America into a branch bank country.

Yet, isn't the whole trend of modern business and modern finance and modern banking toward bigness? Have not large units, large organizations been found necessary in most lines of activity?

* * *

I rather think that branch banking will come into vogue in this country regardless of any action the A. B. A. may take this year, or the next.

But I also believe that it will not wipe out intelligently managed small banks in small communities, any more than chain stores and mail-order houses have ruined well-managed grocery stores or other stores.

STANDARD OILS UP ON NEW YORK CURB

Special feature on the New York Curb Exchange was persistent accumulation of Standard Oil issues, generally at steadily advancing prices. Many of these stocks established new high records. Heaviest trading was in Standard Oil of Indiana, over 30,000 shares changing hands in the first half of the day on a movement that carried its price up from 118¼ to 121¾, a new high.

The most violent advance was in Standard Oil of New York, which ranged in the early hours from 562 to 577, after selling as low as 532 Monday.

HIGHER PRICES ARE REACHED BY GRAINS

Higher prices were reached by grains in the Chicago pit. Wheat sold ⅝ to ½ higher; corn, ¼ to ⅝ higher; oats, ⅛ to ¼ higher. Wheat—Dec. 104⅞ to 105½; May 108¼ to 108⅝. Corn—Dec. 60⅛ to 60¼; May 62¼ to 62⅝.

EXPRESS ISSUES GO SHARPLY FORWARD

Numerous new highs were set on the New York Stock Exchange for the first time in weeks, when oils, rails and specialties led another upturn which was gradually extended over a broad list. Express company issues were among those to go forward sharply.

U. S. Steel took on 1½ at 103½.

Records for all time were set by Postum Cereal, up 3 at 112, and American Radiator, up 4 at 126.

NEW 1922 HIGHS.

New year's highs were made by Beechnut, up 2 at 45; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 6¼ at 203¾; Standard Oil of California, up 6 at 126; Otis Elevator, 2 at 163; Air Reduction, ⅝ at 61; Adams Express, 1⅝ at 82⅝; Delaware & Lackawanna, 4½ at 139½; Electric Storage Battery, 1½ at 57¼; National Biscuit, 8 at 185½, and Kresge, 8½ at 185.

American Express was up 4¼ at 141¼.

Among major late day advances were Associated Oil, 4½ at 120½; Woolworth, 3⅞ at 92¾; Lorillard, 5 at 174; Mex Pete, 3½ at 182¾; Stromberg, 2¼ at 56; Atlantic Coast Line, 2½ at 121¼, and American Can, 3⅝ at 61⅞.

COPPERS IN DEMAND.

Copper stocks were in good demand, and prices were distinctly firmer. September copper sales aggregated 130,000,000 pounds.

Most of the reports reaching the market were of a favorable nature, indicating a good prospect of an amicable settlement of the Near East trouble, and steady progress of the domestic prosperity wave.

Production of coal during the week ending September 30 surpassed all expectations, being by far the largest for any week since April 1. The government's cotton crop report was about as expected, indicating a condition of 50 per cent. against 57.0 a month ago and an estimated crop of 10,135,000 bales.

Call money was marked down to 4¾ per cent. with scattered loans reported at 4½.

Liberty Issues Are Up in Bond Market

In the New York bond market conflicting price movements took place, but the main trend was upward. In the foreign list Belgian 7½s and Japanese 4s moved up about a point each, while Brazil 8s, State of San Paulo 8s and United Kingdom 5½s of 1937 lost ground. Liberty issues were irregular.

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—Some more stocks have indicated a stop in their reaction, but nothing yet indicates the resumption of the main upward movement. Avoid buying on top of rally and wait for further reactions.

F. L. MILLIKEN & CO. says of Butte & Superior—"There is every reason to expect that the final six months of this year will reveal highly encouraging earnings on the 292,000 shares outstanding. This expectation is now being reflected in the market price of the stock."

AMERICAN TELEPHONE, though fact is not generally known, has a book value higher than the present market.

CENTRAL LEATHER is forecast in some quarters to show substantial earnings for the year's last three months. Stock is now around half its tangible asset value.

HUNT, ELLIS & CO. say—"With strong working capital position and mounting net, United States Smelting outlook is most promising."

OLD DOMINION has a ten-year contract with Miami in disposing of water pumped from its property. Miami takes 1,000,000 gallons daily of ordinary mine water at rate of 5 cents per 1,000 gallons.

ANNACONDA is buying copper to supplement supply for its brass mills.

IN COPPER market 14 cents a pound is the price at which business is being done. Wall Street hears United Metals Selling Company is holding off for 14½ cents.

LEATHER market improvement is evidenced by statement that American Hide & Leather in August showed largest earnings for any month in two years. Accumulated dividends on preferred now amount to 125 per cent.

CONSOLIDATED COPPER MINES is pushing development work, retimbering the Minnesota shaft, which has not been used for a dozen years, and preparing to sink a new shaft on the Minnesota claim.

NEVADA CONSOLIDATED'S high-grade direct smelting ore runs close to Minnesota claim and there is a possibility it will be encountered by Consolidated Copper Mines.

COTTON FUTURES ALL SELL HIGHER

Cotton was firm in New York. October, 20.40, up .20; December, 20.75, up .25; January, 20.50, up .17; March, 20.85, up .25; May, 20.65, up .30; July, 20.43, up .20.

UNITED FRUIT IN GOOD EARNINGS UP TO DATE

For the nine months to October 1 United Fruit Company earned in excess of $15,000,000 after charges and normal income taxes. As illustrating the earning steadiness of United Fruit of late years, due to the diversified income, the profits this year are almost identical with the results for the same period last year, the very slight difference being in favor of 1922.

It is estimated that income taxes this year will run between $3,750,000 and $4,000,000. On the basis of the higher estimate United Fruit has already earned a surplus of well over $3,000,000 above the full $8 dividend on the outstanding 1,000,000 shares.

Guesses of earnings for the next three months are likely to run wide of the actual figures, but it would seem in view of the current steadiness of freight revenue and the seasonal improvement in passenger receipts during the cold months that United Fruit should show at least $4,000,000 and possibly $5,000,000 for the final quarter of the year.

This would spell gross earnings of $19,000,000 to $20,000,000 for the full year and a balance after taxes of $15 to $16 a share. It will be surprising if the big company does not hit the 1922 goal of profits set by the management early this year of twice the dividend.

In 1921 United Fruit earned $16.97 a share and in 1920, the banner year, $29.01 a share.

BIRD MACHINE HAS 200 P. C. DIVIDEND

Bird Machine Company plans to cancel present $100,000 par value 8 per cent. preferred stock and to issue $200,000 new 8 per cent. preferred as a 200 per cent. stock dividend to holders of present $100,000 common stock of record September 26.

Ray Hercules.

To G. B. B. Revere—Ray Hercules is rather inactive and speculative. The Ray Hercules Copper Company was reorganized in January of this year into the Ray Hercules Mines Corporation. The company has fifty men at work at present cleaning up the property and retimbering under ground. It has been closed during the copper depression, but both mine and plant are being put in shape where full operations can be resumed when directors deem it advisable. Robert Linton, president, estimates ore reserves wholly or partially developed at 3,744,000 tons, averaging 2.43 per cent. copper.

International Paper.

To I. S., Allston.—International Paper Company outlook is improving and is good at this time. The company is a combination of twenty-five pulp mills and ten sawmills. These are widely scattered through five States and the Canadian provinces. Some of the American mills are old, small and high cost producers. The completion of the new mill at Three Rivers, Canada, will probably mean the ultimate shutting down of some of these properties.

Under the stimulus of war, earnings soared and in the boom following the war, earnings on the common reached their peak at $52.07 a share in 1920. This was an abnormal and short-lived prosperity. In 1921 the company showed a net loss of $7,106,398, company running into strike difficulties which cost something under $5,000,000. The company has ended this trouble and has established an open shop. Improved efficiency under this system means roughly $2.50 a ton, assuming equal wages.

LEGAL EXPERTS SWARM FREIGHT RATE FIGHT

The hearing on freight differentials began today before Robert E. Quirk, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the State House.

The hearing is on a petition of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and other trade organizations representing New England seaports, for the abolition of differential export and import freight rates between Boston and the Middle West. Inasmuch as the decision of the hearing may affect scores of other ports throughout the United States and Canada, the most imposing of legal talent ever gathered together at a single hearing was present. The petitioners were represented by Edgar E. Clark, former chaiman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Wilbur LaRoe and Frank S. Davis, manager of the Maritime Association.

CITES CONSTITUTION.

William Odlin of Boston and Andover, appearing as a citizen, threw the proceedings into an uproar when he protested against the whole proposition as unconstitutional. He said that under the Constitution of the United States all decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission as to railroad rates which result in showing a preference of one port over another were without authority of law and unconstitutional.

There was much scratching of legal heads when he cited as his authority Article 1, Section 9, Paragraph 6 of the Constitution of the United States, citing prohibition of regulation of commerce or revenue which gives preference to any ports.

If investigation of Odlin's claim is found to be based on law it may upset the whole rate structure in the United States.

HURT BOSTON.

Attorney Clark, opening the case for the petitioners, stated that the present rate differentials have dried up the import and export trade of the port of Boston. He said the rate differentials were the result of controversies between carriers and were not based on transportation costs of the different ports, nor upon equal rates for equal distances.

City Should Protect People From Coal Famine

Mayor Curley rises to the occasion when he suggests that the city appropriate sufficient money to purchase on behalf of the people of Boston enough coal to carry them through the present crisis.

The last Constitutional Convention provided that in such a crisis the cities and towns might do just this sort of thing. Indeed, it ought never to have been necessary to have made such a constitutional provision. But that is another story of courts attempting to hog-tie the people in the extension of their public functions.

We are glad that the City Council agrees with the Mayor and makes appropriation to protect the people of the city. The other cities and towns of the State ought to follow the example of the Mayor of Boston. It ought not to be possible for people to suffer for the want of a necessity of life in a great, prosperous nation like ours which nature has endowed with unparalleled natural resources, among which are huge coal deposits, which are denied to us through misgovernment and greed and stupidity.

We want to assure the hundreds and thousands of readers that there is no need and no good excuse for any worry concerning the supply of coal. When we do not receive it when we need coal it is through the fault of our public officials and the greed of our railroads and mine owners. But it is chiefly through the fault of our public officials—the Harding administration, our members of Congress, our Governors, our Mayors, law officers and legislators, and ultimately the people themselves.

We do not blame the railroads. We do not blame the mine owners. We are all created selfish human beings. It is that selfishness which makes for progress. Nature put it in us to stimulate us ever to advance. But it is our fault if we, as a whole, allow any individuals among us to employ that selfishness unfairly at our cost.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, our Democratic candidate for Governor, suggests that we take the mines and operate them as a public function. The Democratic State platform has for years declared for the public ownership and operation of the railroads. All the chief candidates on the Democratic ticket of Massachusetts, we understand, believe in the public ownership and operation of the railroads.

If we do not undertake some fundamental cure we shall have this shortage always threatening us and it will always be used as an excuse to push up higher and higher the price of coal.

Tariff and Foreign Trade

Some Measure of Reciprocity Needed If We Would Extend Our Market Abroad

Already we are beginning to feel the hostility which our excessive tariff rates are bound to create in other countries. An Associated Press dispatch announces that the permanent tariff commission and the French Ministry of Commerce have taken up the question of the duty charges in the American ports to this country. The commission will hear representatives of the French industry on the advisability of taking retaliatory measures to meet the new American tariff bill.

Of course, we have a perfect right to put what tariff we choose upon our goods. We must protect our own industries first. But we ought to have kept in mind the fact that other countries have the same right which we have and that there is another side to the question. Our own market no longer will support our huge industries. We must seek foreign markets constantly, and if our industries are to grow we must seek a greater and greater foreign market.

This requires some measure of reciprocity. We cannot erect a huge Chinese wall around our country and expect other nations not to do likewise. The sale of products abroad involves the purchase of products abroad, for no nation can permanently buy in excess of the amount of its selling. Nor can a nation permanently sell in excess of its purchases, except a very young country which is purchasing money for development.

No creditor nation can sell constantly above the amount of its purchases, and America has ceased to be a debtor nation and has become the greatest creditor nation in the world.

This new Republican tariff will certainly raise the cost of living in the United States, and in all probability will greatly impair our foreign trade.

Anglo-American Debate

We are exceedingly pleased that Bates College, in Maine, defeated the representatives of Oxford, England, on the League of Nations.

The complaint which one of the English boys made, that the American method of debating was very different, rather surprises us. He say that the Englishmen debate as they do in Parliament, while the Americans debate as lawyers arguing before a jury, with carefully ordered, carefully arranged facts.

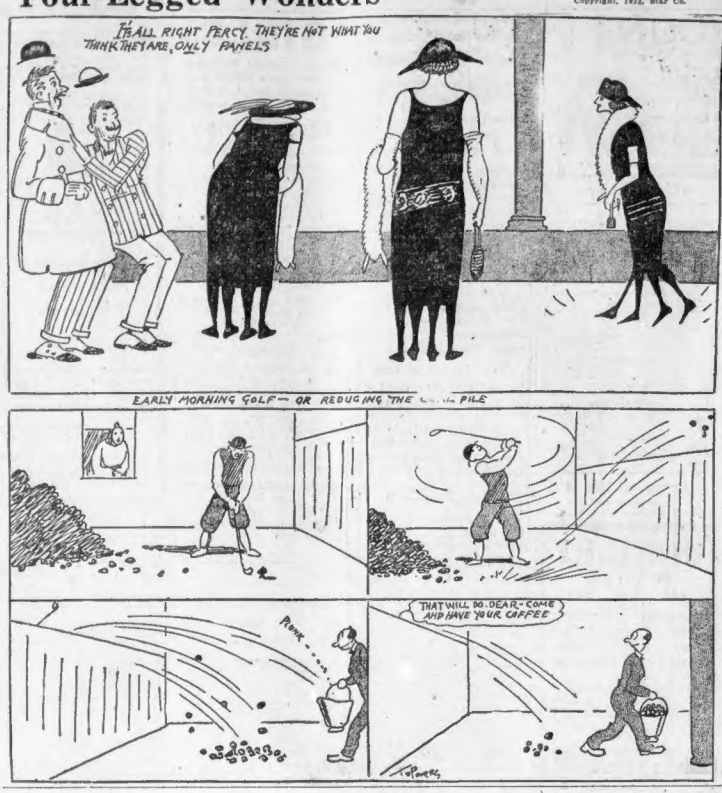

Perhaps the young man was misquoted. We rather think he must have been, for we do not know how logistic methods can vary very much. We would ordinarily assume that an argument in the British House of Commons would be much more logical, with facts much better in hand and much better arranged than an argument in a law court to a jury, for there is plenty of time to prepare an argument in the House of Commons. It can even be committed to memory. Certainly there is more time for preparation, for gathering facts and the careful arrangement of them so that they may be logically and effectively presented. In a trial, however, the lawyer is obliged to rise immediately after the close of the evidence and present the facts to the jury as he hastily marshals them while he is bowing to the judge and saying, "Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen."

These young men seem to be very fine fellows, and we hope that they never lose a decision when their presentation of their case is not clearly less able than the presentation of their American opponents.

Tariff on Toys

Editor Boston American:

I observed in Thursday's Boston American Mr. Babson's letter in regard to the tariff. What I am interested in is, naturally, the line that I manufacture and I notice that he says that the children of the United States will have to pay more for toys this year than they did last year. A toy that was purchased in Germany by a buyer of a large toy store in New York City will show you whether the American manufacturer is getting the profits or the store that is handling same. Toy building blocks were purchased in Germany for 21 7-10c; charges (transportation, etc.) 6 7-10c; duty (rate 35 per cent.) 7 6-10c; landing cost in the United States, 35c; retail price in the United States, $4.00; percentage of retail price to the landed cost, 1042 per cent.

Most of the toys that are manufactured in Europe are made in homes where small factories are located. Young children from the ages of nine are compelled to work in their home fourteen and fifteen hours a day making toys for the American market.

When we asked for an extra 35 per cent. tariff our aim was, and is, not to increase prices, but to try and keep our industries alive.

In Canadian Ranks

Editor Boston American:

I want to say a few words regarding this "Wearing of the Union Jack" letter discussion. H. M. W. of Hudson, says in part: "Some of the boys who are wearing this wonderful button are good true Americans, who showed their true colors and enlisted in the Canadian army before America's entrance into the World War." I think the way to show your true American colors, enlist in the army of a foreign country? I waited till my own country, America, called then I enlisted. UNCLE SAM'S SON.

Berlin, N. H.

Negro Question

Editor Boston American:

I am a full-blooded white man. I did my duty as a service man across the waters with both France and America. I really thought America would broaden some of her narrow-minded views with the signing of the armistice, but instead, we seem to be sinking deeper and deeper into bigotry, selfishness, etc.

I don't blame the negroes of Winchester for refusing to see the School Board herd their children apart, as though they were afflicted with the plague. Have we forgotten the negro men who went across and did all they possibly could do for America, side by side with the white men? In Georgia the newspapers boast of the ninth lynching within sixty days, is what a friend wrote me. How can we conscientiously criticize the Turks for what they are doing when we are equally as guilty in our own crimes?

A WHITE MAN WHO VALUES MANHOOD NOT THROUGH RACE OR COLOR.

Fuel Scandal

Editor Boston American:

The scandal in the fuel situation in Massachusetts is growing by leaps and bounds. The appointee named by the Republican Governor of this State, Mr. Phelan, is admitted connected with the sale of bituminous fuel as a business, and still he has not the public decency to resign from his position as fuel administrator. Soft coal is selling in the vicinity of $13 a ton in this city, and yet the harbor is filled with ships loaded with British coal which was bought in England by Irish coal speculators at a very low price, transported to this city at another very low price on British bottoms, and the fleecers of the public are endeavoring to soak the industries of the State and the domestic users of coal the top notch price of American mined bituminous for this import. Furthermore, while there is plenty of seasoned cord wood lying corded along the roads outside of the twenty-five mile zone of Boston, which the farmers are willing to sell at $6 a cord, yet in Boston and surrounding cities, we find hard cord wood, the very same wood, being sold at $23 a cord! Where is the fuel administration? Is it permitting high prices on cord wood, locally, so as to prevent the disposal of wood to the public in order that the British adventurers into to pocket robbing may dispose of their expensive cargoes at exorbitant prices?

A CONSTANT READER.

Emblem of Service

Editor Boston American:

"Unhyphenated American," do you realize that the button you refer to is the emblem of "service at the front" with the Canadian army? In the battalion in which I served there were Americans, Indians, whites, colored, Irish, Canadians, English, all kinds, Scotch, Welsh, Greek, Russian, Polish, one Alsatian, two Japs and one Mexican. These I know for sure. There were possibly others. Now, shall these men be ashamed to wear the emblem of their service in one of the armies that ate Flanders mud and chased cootles while you probably said, "Let George do it?" I, for one, am proud of my button, not for the fing on it, but for what it stands.

ONE OF THE BHOYS.

British Labor Party

Editor Boston American:

In answer to one Adele Farrar, would say that the author of the epistle is correct in the assertion that England deserves due credit for her justice to the returned soldier. But no thanks is due in my mind to the British statesmen. It was brought about through pressure of that stalwart body, the British Labor party. The time is not far distant when the American workers will form an alliance with their British brothers of toil, and secure for themselves a larger measure of the things they produce.

Want Crutches?

Does anyone need crutches? The Boston American has received offers from more than a dozen persons who have these aids to the disabled to give away. Send in your requests. B. B. J. has already been supplied.

Editor Boston American:

I have a brand new pair of crutches measuring 45 inches that I would be glad to send to anyone in need of same.

MRS. A. J. R.

Editor Boston American:

If you will send the length of crutches the war veteran needs and his address I will send him a pair of the best crutches.

G. F. W.

Babies' Needs

Editor Boston American:

My little girl is six months old and only weighs 9 pounds and 7 ounces, is a very sick little girl and what she needs is a baby carriage to be out in the air.

MRS. V. C.

Editor Boston American:

I have three little ones and am to become a mother in a few days and Mrs. G.'s offer of a baby carriage would certainly help me very much. My husband has been out of work for thirteen weeks and it is very hard to keep the wolf from the door

MRS. D. C.

Editor Boston American:

I have the address of the home of a baby who is in need of the baby's bath tub and baby carriage that have been "mouldering away in the attic."

MRS. E. N.

Ed. Note—The baby's bath tub and carriage mentioned have already found a new owner. Perhaps some other of our readers could help out the above applicant.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

YOU are versatile if born today, and should be adept at anything you undertake—if only you undertake it. There, however, is the key to your character. You find it extremely hard to make up your mind to do anything. Not that you are irresolute—your interests are simply so many and so varied that one thing after another seizes your attention and distracts your mind from what you are doing.

Today is one auspicious promise for the initiating of business projects—particularly those involving the exchange of agricultural produce.

Your ensuing year will be quiet and untroubled. You will suffer some slight illness, but you will be refreshed by convalescence.

A child born today will be robust, ungovernable and ambitious —a personality to be led rather than compelled.

DO YOU ADMIT DEFEAT TOO READILY?

It is a homely saying that "there is more than one way to kill a cat," meaning, of course, there is more than one way to get what you are after.

Just because you are barred or blocked in one direction in a worthy objective is no reason why you should sit down and whine about it.

Get up and try again.

If you cannot make it the second time, think it over and approach it from another angle.

This may not work out, but you cannot allow yourself to stop if you still realize you are right in wanting that certain thing.

Now all this does not mean that you should pull things through regardless of everybody and everything just because you have said it or willed it.

Extreme obstinacy is a dangerous thing, unless you are more than sure you are right.

But the quality of everlastingly sticking to things till you get them is a wonderful qualification to have, if you are a thinking person whose first question to self is, "Is it right?"

Be sure you are right, then go ahead, slowly, carefully, watchfully, but get there.

SEEN AND HEARD

ALTHOUGH he is a director in a large company that owns soft coal mines in Utah, STATE FUEL ADMINISTRATOR JAMES J. PHELAN is burning wood to heat his home these chilly Autumn days. "With wood that I pay $14 a cord for I am getting better results than with hard coal at $16 or $16 a ton," he said.

RALPH HIRD, junior 50-yard champion of Greater Boston, has been unanimously elected captain of the South Boston High track squad. Although he did not break any records last year, he easily excelled all his opponents.

PROFESSOR DAVID D. VAUGHAN of Boston University, with his wife, recently returned from an automobile trip during which they covered nine States and two Canadian provinces. The professor maintains that the automobile makes a vacation a real diversion and he will try it again.

Suicides may now be buried with the Episcopal service, according to a resolution proposed by BISHOP WILLIAM LAWRENCE and adopted by the general convention of that denomination at its sessions in Portland, Oregon. BISHOP LAWRENCE maintained that, if murderers were buried with the Episcopal burial service, why should a discrimination be made against suicides?

For forty-nine years, from 1869 to 1918, ATLAS SKINNER, a freed slave, with a genius of making clocks function properly, took care of the clocks at City Hall. During the nearly half a century of his service no one could set one's watch with a feeling of surety by any clock in the building. In 1918 Atlas died, and since then only one clock in three in City Hall runs at all, and the ones that do run all tell a different story about the time o' day.

CURATOR MORSE at the Franklin Park aviary has the world's largest flying cage, with scores of varieties of birds inside, that are rare and otherwise. The sea gull we all so easily recognize when it is on the wing, fools many when walking about in the cage.

Among railway officials who are not afraid to take off their coats and get down to real hard work, is VICE-PRESIDENT GEORGE COX of the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway. When a big snow storm hits that road, MR. COX thinks nothing of donning some warm clothes and working all night long on a snow-plow. That is the secret of his popularity among the employes.

Dapper KARL MARTIN, for many years a familiar figure about Pemberton square, is the originator of a new fad, namely, the wearing of two buttonhole bouquets. At least Karl appeared about his usual haunts recently wearing a carnation in the top coat and one in his undercoat.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON LIGHTNING AND HAIL

By Garrett P. Serviss

"During an electrical storm the following theory was advanced as to the cause of hail, which, it was noticed, accompanied the rain. A flash of lightning is probably a flame; a flame denotes the expenditure of heat; the heat necessary to produce the flame was drawn from the water in the vicinity of the flame or flash; when the heat is withdrawn from the water the water is frozen and descends as hail. Will you kindly express your opinion on this subject?—W. Hardan, Philadelphia."

YOUR theory has much logical force. Whether we regard the lightning flash as "flame" or not, at any rate it is known to be accompanied by intense heat, developed with great rapidity.

In passing through the air heavily charged with moisture the enormous electric discharge that we call lightning must, by the sudden heating effect, not only expand the water particles into vapor but must also expand the air itself. This expansion, as you remark, withdraws heat from the immediate surroundings, and, it seems reasonable to believe, that a portion of the atmospheric moisture, already in the act of condensing and coalescing into rain drops, is instantaneously frozen by the sudden draft made upon its heat energy to maintain the expansion initiated by the lightning.

For many persons, no doubt, the most questionable feature of this theory would be its implication that heat can produce cold. They would say: "Why, a hot stove does not make its surroundings cold!"

True, but the two cases are not therefore are not comparable. The stove has a perennial supply of heat from the combustion of the fuel within it, and this heat is given to the surrounding atmosphere and to objects in the vicinity, thus raising their temperature.

Nevertheless, the stove in expanding the air uses up a portion of its heat, which is thus withheld from surrounding objects, and if this expansion were to become instantaneous and very great, while the stove's internal supply was exhausted with equal rapidity, the effect would be a sudden intense cooling of the surroundings, whose molecular energy (heat) would be called upon to help maintain the gaseous expansion. And this, it may be affirmed, is what happens on a vast scale when hail is formed in thunder clouds.

The "hail cannon," in whose efficacy the peasants of France and Northern Italy have so much confidence, illustrate this subject. It has been observed in the vine-growing regions that hail, which is very destructive to vineyards, never falls except in connection with a thunder-squall. If there is no lightning there is no hail, no matter how hard the downpour of rain may be. The desirable thing to do then, if it can be accomplished, is to prevent the occurrence of lightning when a Summer storm comes up.

This is supposed to be effected in some measure by the shock of the explosion or by the mass of whirling air sent cloudward by the explosion initiated by the lightning.

If People Live Together for a Length of Time They Grow to Look Like Each Other

Science proves that if people live together for a certain length of time they grow to look like each other. No wonder so many couples are getting divorced. They live together until people begin taking them for brother and sister.

One woman said when her husband got to look like her she'd give him arsenic.

He said as soon as he began resembling her he'd take it.

But there shouldn't be any trouble like that. When a woman begins resembling her husband she can wear a veil and when he begins looking like her he can grow a beard.

Still, he'd have to shave every time he wanted to show her how homely she was.

If a man and wife really do grow to look like each other only one of them has to go to a beauty parlor.

A man's beauty is only skin deep, that's why his wife usually gets under his skin.

A couple who do look alike are continually fighting. He says he looks like her and she insists she looks like him. Then they get into a battle and fight until neither one of them look like themselves.

Some couples are so homely that they get married at night. They're afraid to get married in the daytime when everybody can see them.

One couple got married in a churchyard in Hollywood and all the pedestrians stopped and watched the ceremony. The bride and groom were so homely everybody thought they were taking a comedy picture.

Some people say that looks don't mean a thing, but you never see any beautiful old maids.

One guy told his fiancee that after they were married a couple of years she'd get to look like him, so she broke the engagement.

She didn't mind using his name and taking his money but she refused to borrow his looks.

If beauty is a joy forever no wonder so many men are unhappy.

It's true that you can marry a homely man and after you've lived with him a few years his looks will grow on you. But when this happens, get a divorce from him and let his looks grow on some other girl.
